TO SENTIMENT NOW-

When times are good and money is plenty it may be well enough to pay $100 to $200 more for the sake of the name which is on the lid of a plano, but in times like these, when even the rich feel the financial depression, it is not only unwise but absolutely foolish to indulge in what is purely sentiment. It is our aim to furnish customers with a first-lass plane at a medium price; and that the public have appreciated our efforts thus far is evidenced by the fact that our business is in-creasing at a most satisfactory rate. In fact, our February sales were 50 per cent. larger than in January What people want now is full value for every dollar expended, and that is what we give. Lost week two prominent organizations purchased planos of us-the Odd Fellows, for their beautiful new building on Main street, and the Young Woman's Christian Association. These societies purchased of us because we gave them better value for their money—and for no other reason. There are no better planos in the world than those we sell and no lower prices or re favorable terms than those quoted at

HEAVY DAMAGE.

Result of the Frost in the Northern Counties. Associated Press Leased-wire Service

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—Reports from Vacaville, Woodland, Elmira, Sui-sun, San Jose, Fresno and Davisville state that frost has practically ruined the apri-cot crop in all the northern and central California localities named. Almonds, prunes, grapes and peaches have also been injured, but deciduous fruits have suffered most. In the neighborhood of Vacaville, the loss is estimated at a quarter of a million dollars and about San Jose the value of fruit destroyed is $100.000 Many orchardists say that their revenu this year will be nothing, and have discharged their employees. A thermometer of 29 deg. did the mischief.

YUBA CITY, March 16.-There have been light frosts here for several mornings past, but this morning it was lighter. No particular damage has been done to the fruit crop. Some apricots will be lost, but peaches, almonds, cherries and other fruits will suffer little, if any. Some early vegetables have been damaged.

Conclude an Arrangement with the Stockholders in the Company.

They Say it Will not Require More Than Haif a Million Dollars to Put the System in Per-fect Order.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—(Special Dispatch.) The Los Angeles Consolidated Electric Railway Company will not be thrown into the hands of a receiver. Arrangements were made whereby this was avoided.

The system in all probability will be placed under the control of the bondholders. An arrangement by which holders control was partly perfected today, and the bondholders, represent-ing about $1,500,000, signed the agree-and improvements upon the system and put it upon a paying basis. No pressure was brought to bear by any of the parties to effect this agreement. The other bondholders, not present at the meeting, will be requested to sign the agreement. If they do so, and everything points that way, all will be well; but if many of them refuse the whole matter will fall through, and then an action for fore-closure will be instituted.

Lovell White, in speaking of the agreement tonight, said "If they sign it, as I expect they will, the change will be a success, as the bondho ders will be satisfied, the stockholders satisfied and the creditors will be paid. It will require less than half a million dollars to put the system in perfect

W. S. MILLSPAUGH. Southern Pacific Claims Adjuster i to Retire.

National San Francisco, March 16.—(Special Dispatch.) W. S. Milspauch, claims adjuster for the Southern Pacific, will retire from the employ of that corporation in a few days.

His retirement will be a surprise to many, but those who are trusted with the inside secrets of the company are net, excited over the downfall of one of Mr. Huntington's pets. Millspaugl will not retire from the employ of the corporation, and give up a handsome monthly salary of his own free will. He has been informed that it will please his masters if he can close up is accounts within the next few days. As claim adjuster for the Southern Pacific Millspaugh was clothed wit. mmense power. Being the appointed of H. E. Huntington his word was almost law when it came to a point or settling claims against the company. The adjustments in damage cases are as a general rule, submitted to a land department chief for approval. Mr. ferrin and others who had occas on to ook over the claims, noticed that two prominent attorneys in this cl.y were getting the baik of the damage cases against the company. It was also b served that the attorneys in quest in seldom went to court with their cases in some way they always managed to come to an amicable agreement with Millspaugh. This led to a suspicion at first, and then to an investigation which brought out some startling

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.-A few hours after the release of Mrs. W. J. Dean, the wife of the notorious comterfeiter from the county jail, on $1000 bail furnished by Mrs. Henrietta Jansen and Miss Meta Jansen, two friends of the unfortunate lady, who reside in Berkeley, an aged gentleman of fine appearance, who gave the name of Henry Wilkerson, called at the county jail to make inquiries about Mrs. Dean who, he says, was for a long time in this employ as cashier in a cestaurant in Los Angeles. Mrs. Dean he pictures as a girl of high moral character, who has been imposed upon by a designing scoundrel and is more sinned against than sinning.

Mr. Wilkerson thinks that from the woman he must surely have hypnotized her, as her actiops cannot possibly be accounted for in any other way. Henry Wilkerson, called at the county

The California Legislature Has Adjourned.

A Desperate but Futile Effort to Get Through the County Division Bill.

The Investigation of the Biggy Sensation-An Exemplification of the Fable of the Man and the Ass.

SACRAMENTO, March 16 .- (Special Dispatch.) The last day of the thirty-first session of the Legislature was productive of no exciting incidents, though a desperate effort was made to call up and get the County Division Bill through the Senate, and it only failed by one vote.

The report of the investigating committee in relation to the Biggy scandal was presented and adopted, and the com-mittee discharged. Though it did not declare the charge against Senator Dunn sustained, it did declare that one of the Senators swore falsely, and the general im-pression created was that it was not Sen-

The committee declared that the investigation ought to be continued, either by the committee eithing after adjournment or by the Sacramento grand jury. After some discussion it was left to the grand jury, which seemed to give general satis-

Senator Biggy says he thinks the report Senator Biggy says he thinks the report of the committee virtually sustains him, and that it went as far as it could. He is pleased that the grand jury is to go ahead with the inquiry, and he told the Times correspondent that the disclosures that might be made would startle the State. He could not tell how far the investigation might go, and would not, therefore, outline the case.

Investigation might go, and would not, therefore, outline the case.

Senator Dunn made a declaration on the floor of the Senate that Mr. Biggy's charges were false, which aroused the latter to say that before God he had accused no man falsely. The President pro tem. started to rule the speakers out of order, but on motion of the Senate they were allowed to make their statement.

The evening session in both-houses was passed in the usual tomfoolery way that accompanies the close of a session. President (pro tem.) Flint was presented with a gold locket, and Speaker Lynch with a gold watch. Several other presentations were made in each aouse, accompanied by eulogistic remarks, and at 1:50 a.m. the Legislature adjourned sine die.

the Davis County Division Bill which passed the Assembly last night. The bill is identical with the Linder bill over which there was a fierce and losing battle early in the session. It required a two-thirds vote to get the bill up for consideration. There was a call of the House and Mr. Frank of Santa Clara and Mr. Martin of Placer were induced to change from nay to aye, but even with their votes one vote was lacking, and by 26 ayes to 14 hays the Senate refused to raise the county division ghost.

The School Teachers' Annuity Fund Bill passed by a vote of 23 ayes to 10 nays and was rushed anto the Assembly.

The following Assembly bills passed: Providing for the incorporation and management of co-operative associations; providing for letting contracts for lighting strests and public buildings in cities and towns; paying the claim of ex-Sheriff Kearney of San Benito; amending the law providing for the management of the Southern California Insane Asylum; amending the law relative to contracts on State buildings; prohibiting the sale of intexicating liquors near Soldiers' Homes; paying john C. It reviews the evidence, as given before the committee, and already published, and concludes that the evidence of Mr. Kahn is not sufficiently corroborative to over-come the conflict in evidence between Biggy and Dunn, and is therefore unable to decide from the evidence adduced, the truth or falsity of the charge in said reso-lution contained.

From all the evidence adduced, it is plain that one of the Senators involved in this affair has sworn falsely and should be held up to the world in his true light and be punished for his misconduct. On the other hand it is equally plain that one of them has spoken the truth and it is but meagre justice to him that he be able to substantiate his words more fully than has been possible in the very limited time at the disposal of the committee. From both considerations, therefore, your committee recommend:

REPORT ADOPTED.

The report was adopted and Senator Fay of San Francisco then offered a resolution, empowering the committee to sit after adjournment. As a substitute, Mr. Burke of Santa Cruz offered a resolution, turning the whole matter over to the Sacramento grand jury.

Mr. Dunn of San Francisco here rose and said the charges against him were utterly false, and he hoped a thorough investigation would be made.

Mr. Biggy replied to Mr. Dunn, in an emphatic speech, declaring that he had never desired to go into politics, but had yielded to the wishes of his friends.

"I came determined to resist all temptation, and I have done so. I have told nothing but the truth in all that I have said that man Dunn denies these charges, but I swear by the God above that all I have said is God's truth."

When Mr. Biggy went on to reiterate the charges about the combine, President Filint called him to order, but on Senator Seawell's motion, Mr. Biggy was allowed to continue. When Mr. Biggy concluded there was more talk. The question was put, and the Burke substitute, turning the whole matter over to the Sacramenio grand lury, was adopted. The Senators then devoted themselves to parliamentary levity, continuing until midnight.

ASSEMBLY.—The Woman Suffrage Bill is dying hard. There was a conference of a special committee of Senators and Assemblymen dast night over the Senate amendment that filed the bill. No agreement was reached, but Mr. Spencer of Lassen asked this morning for a new committee, and the Speaker appointed T. Guy Phelps of San Matco, Mr. Couglin of San Francisco, and Mr. Llewellyn of Los Angeles to wrestle with the problem.

The bill paying four San Francisco papers $2000 apiece for publishing the constitutional amendments in German, French and Italian, was refused passage by a vote of 29 yeas to 23 nays.

Mr. Dinkelspiel of San Francisco called up the bill appropriating $2000 for the maintenance of the State Board of Horticulture for the next two years, and told of the important work of the board. The bill passed by a vote of 61 to 0.

Bills passed paying the widow of A. W. McGinniss $7500; paying a claim of Cornelius Lynch; amending the law relative to the municipal bonds for public improvements, and repealing acts of 1885 and 1887.

"While this bill professes to be a regu lation of the selling and redeeming of transportation tickets, it goes far be-yond that. While it is claimed that it is yone that. While it is claimed that it is an attempt to regulate or prohibit the sale of tickets by persons known as 'scalpers,' it in fact prevents and prohibits the sale of tickets by individuals who have received or purchased them lawfully and in good faith. Under the provisions of this act a citizen purchasing a ticket with a bona fide intention to travel on the same, may sell the ticket to any individual or corporation, and the law thereby authorizes the purchase of such ticket by such other person, yet the person who thus purchases under authority of law, and for a valuable consideration the ticket, he becomes a criminal when he sells or gives to another the property and the right he has procured under direct authority of the act."

It is Shown that They are as Good and as Pure as Foreign Vint-ages of Similar Grades and Cheaper.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—C. Carpy, president of the California Wine Associa-tion, has replied to the warning of the New York Sun, that a California combination to raise the price of wines was a grave mistake, which might forfeit the Eastern market to this State. "While the prices paid to the producers here have advanced 80 per cent." said Mr. Carpy, "the cost of wine to Eastern consumers has not been increased, nor s it likely to advance. In the readjustment of prices, following the recent viticultural organizations, the producer has simply been enabled to get a fair share of the profits which were formerly absorbed by market a better quality of wine we hope to create a demand for California vintages to create a demand for California vintages among Americans who have not been wine drinkers and among those who have been demanding foreign wines. We have killed here the prejudice against California wines. We must do the same work in the East by proving that our wines are at least as good and as pure as foreign vintages.

"The effect of our dealers' organization "The effect of our dealers' organization will be to give us a fair profit on our capital and at the same time enable the grower to live, free himself from his mortgage, and make his industry a prosperous and healthy one. A year ago the dealers were losing money. The producer is now receiving 80 per cent. more than a year ago and at that is not getting an exorbitant price for his wine. A year ago sound, ordinary wines were being sold at 5 and 6 cents a gallon. Similar wines command today 11 and 12 cents.

exorbitant price for his wine. A year ago sound, ordinary wines were being sold at 5 and 6 cents a gallon. Similar wines command today 11 and 12 cents.

"In estimating a fair wholesale selling price there should be added to these prices 5 cents for cooperage, from 3 to 4 cents for handling, maturing and marketing, and we should be entitled to make a dealer's profit of 5 cents a gallon. Therefore, the wine-grower feceiving 12½ cents, sound ordinary wines should be sold to Eastern dealers at 26 cents, f.o.b., at San Francisco. Freight to New York costs from 3 to 4 cents a gallon according to route and method of shipment. Therefore the price should be about 30 cents in New York.

"The specific duty of 30 cents a gallon on foreign wines is a regulating factor, and freight from Europe to New York costs but from 1½ to 2 cents per gallon. New York selling prices have not yet been advanced to the figure mentioned. The actual selling price today f.o.b. at San Francisco is 20 cents in large quantities. A year ago it was 11 and 12 cents. These prices include cooperage. Today in New York the actual cost to wholesale dealers of sound ordinary California wines is 27 to 29 cents a gallon. A year ago it was about 15 cents, cooperage included. "The prices to consumers in New York remain the same and will not be advanced. The price remains at 40 to 60 cents a gailon. Under the former low, ruinous prices the retailing middlemen made all the profits, the producers selling at less than cost and the wholesalers here, and in the East; making 1 or 2 cents a gallon. "Though the Eastern retailer pays a few cents more a gallon he cannot well advance his prices and retain his trade, and he still shas a large margin for profit. The New York restaurateur who sells a half bottle of California wine for 10 or 15 cents now pays 30 cents a gallon and still gets a good profit. The organizations of dealers and producers here but equalize the profits and have not, and will not advance the price to Eastern con-and still gets a good profit. The organiza-tions of dealers and producers here but equalize the profits and have not, and will not advance the price to Eastern con-sumers. The results of the combinations are, then, to give the producers living prices, the dealers fair but small profits, and the consumers better wines at the same price."

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—Alice Edith Dickerson, who claimed to be the widow of the late Thomas H. Blythe, has signed an agreement with Florence Blythe Hinckley, whereby she relinquishes the name of Blythe and all claim on the estate. The consideration is not known, but it supposed to be $30,000 and an allowance of $175 a month. Alice Edith, who lived with the millionaire, was declared not to be his wife by the Protect Court, and an appeal from this decision a now pending before the Supreme Court. THE VALLEY ROAD.

DETAILS OF ESCAPE.

CAIRO, March 16.-The following are Bey from the Mahdi's Camp, Omdurman, Khartoum, where he has been a prisoner for elevn years. Slatin Bey escaped with the assitance of a Sudan merchant named Eyali, who arrived here from Omdurman some months ago, bearing a letter from Slatin Bey, in which the latter asked if some arrangement could be made with Eyali so as to enable him to escape. Eyali was placed in communication with the Austrian Consul here, Baron Heidler von Egeregg-Syrenstein, who made a contract with the merchant, the latter agreeing to try and effect the escape of Slatin Bey. When the arrangements were completed Eyali returned to Omdurman and iaid his plans to get Slatin Bey away, but the first attempt failed. Eyali, however, persisted and eventually succeeded in getting Slatin Bey out of Omdurnan. The merchant closely followed the plans of Abdallah, the native who was successful in bringing about the escape of Father Rosignoli from the camp of the Mahdi. He obtained possession of camels, and when the proper time arrived arose out of the camp at night and made at 10th speed for Berber, fellowing the Nile as closely as possible by night, and hiding in the ritis in the day time. For eighteen days, suffering great privations, the fugitives journeyed through the desert of Sassoun. It was three days after they ceft Omdurman before their escape was a hot pursuit, and a body of pursuing dervishes reached Kokrels, sixty miles from Suakim, last week. Slatin Bey made nins previous attempts to escape.

Slatin Bey, who is an Austrian, was the Egyptian Governor of Senaar when Khartoum fell and en. ordon was killed. At the time he was led in chains to GKhartoum, where he has been in prison since. In the early part of 1889 a family Eving in Vienna named Slatin received a letter from Khleffir Abdallah, who succeeded the late Mahdi, as chieftain of Egypt's rebeillious provinces in Soudan. The letter stated that Slatin Bey had adopted the religion of Mohammed.

stated that Slatin Bey had adopted the religion of Mohammed.

"He lives with us," the latter continued, "honored by our friendship, one of our valued advisers, and is perfectly content and happy in the highest degree. He sees neither grief nor chagrin; but on the contrary he is perfectly healthy and is looked upon as our own son, and one of the most honored Mahdis."

The letter invited any of Slatin's relatives or any Austrian to visit him, assuring them they could do so in perfect safety in consideration of Slatin's atthin Islam, and that he had become one of he most eminent and highly esteemed Mahdis. At about the same time a letter was received from Slatin, which established the authenticity of this communication. Reports concerning Slatin have been contradictory, but it is believed he was emposity the propersylder of the reflected his established.

After Father Oherwalder effected his escape in December, 1891, he stated that there wer forty Europans still held at Obdurman; that they were kept manacled, and were often cruelly heaten, and were so strictly guarded cruelly beaten, and were so strictly guarded that they had lost all hope of ever escaping. He also stated that Slatin Bey was still alter, and belonged to the body guard of the Mahdi's successor, but that he also was closely watched.

The Future of Gold Production.

(March Review of Reviews:) While our Southern and Western statesmen are still bent upon securing the free coinage of silves, it is at least worth while to note the fact that the relative scarcity of gold may be considerably affected by new conditions of production. The distinguished editor of the Economiste Francais, M. Paul Leroy-Beaulieu, has recently predioted that the annual production of gold in the coming quarter century will be double that of the average of the past twenty or thirty years. He has given close attention to the opening up of the South African gold mines, and anticipates an enormous output in that region. In this connection, it is also interesting to observe that certain experts in Denver—which has been the very heart and center of the free silver movement—new declare that Colorado has already reached a point in the production of gold where her mining interests as a whole would sacrifice more than they would gain by the free coinage of silver. Colorado's production of gold and silver last year was approximately $24,000,000, equally divided between the two. Not to repeat the arguments that are advanced in order to convert Colorado from its free silver doortines, it is evident that some impression upon local public opinion is likely to be made by the increase from year to year in the output of the western gold mines. M. Leroy-Beaulieu contends that the present is a highly opportune time for the United States to change its policy, to abandon its predilection for silver and to proceed to absorb its full share of the world's stock of gold. It might be argued with some seriousness that if the free-elivermen should agree for the time being to join hands with the so-called "goldbugs." this country could in a few years control the buillion market in such a fashion that overtures for international bimetallism would come from the other side of the sea. WASHINGTON, March 16.—The President and party reached the city on the Violet shortly after 4 p.m.

There were with Mr. Cleveland, Dr. O'Relly, his physician; Commander Lamberton, superintendent of the light-house district, and Commander Wilde, the secretary of the Light-house Naval Board. When the vessel landed at Stevenson's wharf, Private Secretary Thurber was the first to board her and greet Mr. Cleveland in his cabin. President Cleveland limped slightly, the result of an accident which happened to him shortly before he left the city. After thanking Capt. Donnell for his many kindnesses, the President was escorted to his carriage.

During the comparatively short time the party were actually hunding for game they managed to conjure fifty fine specimens of brant, forty-one ducks and twelve snipe. Only two brace of the largest ones were carried away from the vessel.

Capt. Donnell says the trip of Mr. Cleveland appeared to give him a very substantial improvement.

Steel Mortars.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The fortification board has finally decided if the Cramps desire to supply fifty twelve-inch mortars at $6300 each for coast defense, under the terms of the Fortifications Appropriation Bill, they must make the mortars equal to the new all-steel mortars. Through their agents the Cramps contend they were required merely to build the mortars to equal the steel-hooped costiron motars, inasmuch as that was the only weapon of the kind in actual use at the date of the passage of theappropriation bill.

the date of the passage of the appropriation bill.

As the Cramps' mortar is of case metal and weighs 43,000 pounds as against 36,000 for the standard all-steel mortar, it may be impossible for them to bring it within the required dimensions.

Among other matters disposed of by the 'board at its last session, was the allotment of $4,200,000 for the purchase of the Seabury 4.72-inch quick-firing gun, now being tested at Sandy Hook in competition with the Canet, Armstrong and Hotchkizs guns and the examination of plana for new gun carriages and range finders. The White Ash Explosion.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—John W. Fleming, United States mine inspector for Utah. has made a report to Secretary Smith regarding the explosion at the White Smith regarding the expicsion at the White Ash coal mine at Cerrillos. N. M., where twenty-five men were killed. On February 24 Fleming says he was at the town when the explosion took place. He does not agree with the Coroner's jury, which reported that the explosion took place because of lack of air. He says it was occasioned by two men going with lights into an abandoned chamber where gas had collected.

Diamond-cutters.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Secretary Carlisle has rendered a decision that diamond-cutting is not a new industry, within the meaning of the act of 1885, and therefore diamond-cutters brought to this courty some months ago, under contract, to engage in diamond-cutting, must be doported. Railway Lands.

Lands to he Opened. WASHINGTON, March 16.—It is expected by the land department that surveys on the Colville Indian reservation will have progressed sufficiently during the summer, and Indian allotments made, so that a million and a half acres will be opened to settlement. These lands are in Northeastern Washington, the cedad lands being on the northern border. Upon the tract tehre are said to be valuable mineral deposits.

Revenue Service Vacancy.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The death of Capt. Shepard leaves a vacancy in the revenue cutter service, which is likely to be fielled very soon. Secretary Carlisie has not yet given any attention to the matter, but it seems to be the general opinion among treasury people, conversant with the situation, that either Chief Schumacher, commander of he revenue cutter Hudson, of New York Harbor, or Capt. C. L. Hooper, now commanding the Rush in Bering Sea, will receive the appointment. Both of these officers have seen many years' service and are said to be thoroughly competent to fil the place.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Commissioner Lameraux has determined to make arrangements at once for the appraisal and sale of abandoned military reservations. The reservation in the Couer d'Alene mining country will be withheld, as it is thought it may be needed for military purposes in view of disturbances that have occurred among the miners in northern Idaho.

The Two Eternal Types in Fiction.

(Hamilton W. Mable in the March Forum:) The novel of romance and adventure has had a long history, and the elements of which it is compounded are recognizable long before they took the form of fiction. Two figures appear and rappear in the mythology of every poetic people, the hero and the wanderer; the man who achieves and the man who experiences; the man who masters life by superiority of soul or bedy, and the man who masters it by completeness of knowledge. It is interesting and pathetic tofind how universally these two figures held the attention and stirred the hearts of primitive men; how infinitely varied are their tasks, their perils, and their vicissitudes. They wear so many guises, they bear so many names, they travel so far and compass so much experience that it is impossible, in any interpretation of mythology, to escape the conviction that they were the dominant types in the thought of the myth-makers. And these earliest story-makers were not idle dreamers, entertaining themselves by endless manufacture of maginary incidents, conditions and persons. They were, on the contrary, the observers, the students the scientists of their period; their endeavor was not to create a fiction but to explain the world and themselves. Their observation was imperfect and they made ludicrous mistakes of fact because they lacked both knowledge and training; but they made free use of the creative faculity, and there is, consequently, a good deal more truth in their daring guesses than in many of those provisional explanations of nature and ourselves which have been based too exclusively on scrutiny of the obvious fact and indifference to the fact which is not less a fact because it is elusive. It is with us no longer a question of a bility or of worth, but a question of a bility or of worth, but a question of a man's power to buy votes s Just as Italy was absorbed by vast estates, so, today, is America absorbed by the corporations. Truly it has been said that this country is today a country of lamilords with the tenants in a helpless minority. It has become a grave question as to whether we are being governed for ourselves or whether we are being governed for ourselves or whether we are being governed for ourselves or whether we are being governed for the foreigners—the foreign fand-finders. And let me say now, and I say in knowing that I may be greeted with the cry of 'Anarchist' or 'alarmist,' that while our 5,000,000 unemployed sit tonight holding out the hand of suppliants, they will some day rise, and the suppliants' hand will become that of the avenger, and will strike down the oppressor. Land is the source of all wealth, and he who owns st, owns the people who must use the land, yet far from enough labor and enough land, yet far from enough wealth. How shall this be remedied? One remedy, at least, is to tax the land speculator. And this, in brief, is the doctrine of the single tax. And let me tell you that if you think I could speak things not orthodox and still escape the displeasures of those in authority over me, you dittle know the discipline of my church."

KINGSTON (Jamaica,) March 16.—Authendic advices, direct, state that the revolution is progressing most favorably.

Exact information as to the various movements cannot readily be obtained, owing to government censorship over telegraphic communications. This was foreseen and provided for. Each section of the revolutionary party has been operating independently so far. Each leader fights on his own account, thus distracting the Spanish forces and leaving them in perpetual doubt as to when and where the next blow will be struck. At every point occupied, the insurgents' first act is to destroy the telegraph so the government shall be left in the dark as to their movements. It is supposed at Havana and sman be left in the dark as to their move-ments. It is supposed at Havana and Santlago that Dr. Grillo, the president of the autonomy party, and Urbana San-chez have fled before the Spaniards. Their novements, however, are strategic. spection.

Besides mystifying the military authori ties by dark movements, the insurgent forces have struck several blows heavily and with rapidity, each, it is declared, having accomplished its object. They were all to secure stragetic positions. were all to secure stragette positions. Many points of vantage are now occupied on land, and good secret coast positions are held, through which supplies are drawn, despite Spain's watchfulness.

At Santiago the insurgents hold a strongly-intrenched position not far from Sev-eral attempts to dislodge them have proven futile and costly to the Spanlards. Moncada is, or rather was, awaiting in-structions and reinforcements, to enable him to cartiure Sartiesco. him to capture Santiago.

At Baire 500 armed men made a demonstration. There were also a few fights in Jaguery Grande, in Matanzas. There were 7000 troops ordered to Santiago on March 1, and there was a fight at Yabarra, with a band of insurgents, who were driven to the mountails. Twenty rifes and 25,000 cartridges were captured.

A lively fight with insurgents at Mocha was reported on March 2, and thirty-four were captured. At Veoutia 200 rebels met the Spanish soldiers. There were eleven killed and many prisoners taken. The same day a demand was made in the Cabinet in Madrid for unlimited appropriations to suppress the rebellion.

The defeat of the Jaguery Grande band took piace on March 4, according to the government. That was at Matanzas. Eighty were routed, while at Murusqua, in the lower end of the island, three different bands were dispossessed and the leaders either killed or made prisoners. Many of the band surrendered.

Few reports of trouble in Santa Clara had been made, but on March 5 martial law was declared there. On that day the insurgents were ambushed at Los Cunas, near Santiago, and there was fience fighting for an hour, after which the rebels ran away. Another band fought and ran, at Monte Christo.

On March 14, fifty rebels were killed and wounded near Guantanamo.

It will be seen that even the government reports show a deal of active fighting, while there is not a single report of the insurgents gaining any advantage.

An American connected with the revolutionary movement said this morning: "We have got the Spaniards so hoodooed they not only don't know where we are, but don't know where they are themselves."

He is enthusiastic and eager to bet at long odds that inside of six months the Spaniards will be out of Cuba. The principal points of preliminary hostilities of Dr. Grillo and his companions on Saturday were Santiago, Mantanzas, Puerto Principe, Baines, Holgin and Guantanamo, where no great conflict had been attempted.

A man-of-war had captured two boats from Key West, manned by Americans, which were making off from the coast. The boats were empty, having obviously carried out heir mission. The Americans were made prisoners on suspicion, but at latest accoun

PENDLETON (Or..) March 16.—Capt. Richards, in command of the troops recently ordered to Umatilla reservation, today held a pow-wow with the Indian chiefs.

The chiefs made long speeches, re ferring to the long years their people had been at peace with the whites and claiming that the Umatilla tribes had always assisted white settlers to repel the invasion of hostile bands of warriors from the North. The powwow was conducted with great mality.

The pipe of peace was smoked and the captain in return brought out a box of Havanas. Sports were then indulged in. Mootenie, champion Indian wrest ler, offered to wrestle with any of the soldiers. Several matches resulted. Mootenie winning them all. Capt. Rich-Mootenie winning them all. Capt. Richards ordered out the troops, who gave an exhibition drill. A large crowd of spectators wetched the proceedings. The chiefs stood in wonder and when a few volleys had echoed amoug the foothills, the Blue Mountain Indians exclaimed: "We no fight people who load up guns Sunday and shoot all the rest of the week."

Capt. Richards then caused the best in the commissary to be set out and, with his officers did the honors to the newly-made Indian citizens. When dinner was over the chiefs and retainers saddled up their horses, shook hands as a token of eternal friendship, and filed away to their lodges toward the head waters of the Umatilla River. A few blood-curdling yells echoed among the peaks, round about the camp, as a reminder of the days when war-paint was worn and tomahawks dangled at their belts.

Guilty of Murder.

JACKSON (Ky.,) March 16.—The jury in the case of Catherine McQuinn, charged in the case of Catherine acquinn, charged with complicity in the murder of Dr. Rader, returned a verdict of guitty of murder in the first degree this morning, fixing the punishment at confinement in the State prison for life. As Mrs. McQuinn left the courtroom in the charge of the jailer she smiled at some of the members of the jury.

Incendiary Fires.

ALGONA (Iowa.) March 16.—At midnight the fifth of a series of incendiary fires started in a building saturated with coal oil. Four structures have been destroyed. The local military was called out and patrolled the town the rest of the night.

HOTELS-

SANTA CATALINA

ISLAND IN WINTER, HOTEL METROPOLE, AVALON.

The inn at Little Harbor, the celebrated island stage-road and the popular coast excursions opened February 1, 1896. A delightful visit.

Hetel service second to none: scenery, climate and other natural attractions of the Island during the winter months are unapproached: excellent wild goat shooting; the bays teem with fish of every variety; the upland scenery, as viewed from the stage re 2.4, defes description.

Santa Catalina is indeased by the traveling public as possessing attractions superior to any locality on the Pacific Coast.

Regular steamer service as per railroad time, tables in Los Angeles daily papers; only 3% hours from Los Angeles.

Do not fail to obtain full information from the BANNING COMPANY, 22: South Spring street, Los Angeles, Cal. Illustrated pamphlets mailed to any address. The Wilmington Transportation Company's ocean passenger steamer Falcon will make daily trips, Sundays excepted. The company reserves the right to change steamers and days of sailing without notice.

Business.

PERSONAL—RED RICE'S—OUR GREAT stores are now crowded with furniture which we promise to sell cheaper than you can buy the same class of goods elsewhere. Some of it is fine and new, some is common every-day furniture. Many of our patrons have suggested that, as we have such a great, centrally-located salesroom, it would be well to open a general auction business in addition to our regular retail business. offering to consign goods to us to be sold at auction. We have concluded to accept the suggestion, and say to all, bring for your goods, whatsoever you want to sell. It too Angeles wants a big, honest auctionhouse we can fill the bill. It will be a square deal with us. We will send for anything you may want sold quick for cash. We will sell to the highest bidder and make prompt, accurate returns. Belleving that you have no hestancy in guaranteeing satisfaction. All the time we shall continue to retail all furniture as usual and will give further notice of auction sales. ing satisfaction. All the time we shall continue to retail all furniture as usual and will give further notice of auction sales. Our Mr. Rice has had 27 years' experience in the auction business in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Further, we shall employ the best talent obtainable. Having decided to enter the field, we shall spare no pains to make the business a success worthy of our proud and bonny city of Los Angeles. THE RED RICE FURNITURE CO., 351-353 N. Main st.

February Statement in Detail.

Aggregate printed in February 404,490

Net daily average circulated 14,319 Our guaranteed circulation exceeds the combined circulation of all other Los Angeles daily newspapers.

NOTE.—Attention is directed to the fact that the NET as well as the QROSS circulation of THE TIMES is shown regularly in these monthly statements. The "returns" are habit ually small, but are always carefully reported and deducted from the gross circulation. The natural fluctuation, up and down, according to the times and seasons, is thus truly exhibited.

THE TIMES is the only Los Angeles paper which has regularly published sworn statements of its circulation, both gross and net, weekly, monthly and yearly, during the passeveral years. Advertisers have the right to know the NET CIRCULATION of the medium which seeks their business, and this THE TIMES gives them correctly, from time to

FOR SALE—PALMER & CHAPIN, FOR SALE-PALMER & CHAPIN,

136 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, and 85 Washington st., Chicago. Managers and Owners of the Tierra Bonita Colonies. OUR POSITION DEFINED IN A NUT-

We are nearing the end of our present work. As explained in our literature we are here neither to speculate nor to build up a permanent business, but to surround our future Southern California homes with agreeable people and extensive orchards.

After ten months' investigation and search throughout California we found at Tierra Bonita:

throughout California we found at Tierra Bonita:

A tract of land hugging the roothills at an elevation of 2500 feet above sea level. Land in a large body at reasonable figures. Magnificent mountain view in every direction. A slope of 100 feet to the mile, insuring perfect drainage and irrigation. A soil rich in potash, lime and phosphoric acid, 25 to 50 feet in depth, and fertile beyond measure. A water supply more than abundant for all future needs, owned by and inseparable from the land. A perfectly dry climate, free from fog, dew or other atmospheric moisture, super-charged with ozone, the healthlest climate in the State. A three-year-old orchard containing all varieties of trees we desired to plant. Trees with bark as smooth as polished wood, vigorous to a degree, and absolutely free from insect pests, a condition not to be found elsewhere. The most superior fruit-drying conditions in the State, requiring no evaporators, and reducing the drying process to ½ the time consumed elsewhere. The above is briefly what we lacked to make delightful homes was:

A large area of orchards. A population of homes was:

A large area of orchards. A population of thrifty people. A large number of handsome building improvements. Instead of waiting 10 or 20 years for these improvements to come, we started in two years ago to force them, and the result to date is—a solid washard tract cut into 10 and 20-acre pieces. come, we started in two years ago to force them, and the result to date is—a solid orchard tract cut into 10 and 20-acre pieces, of 1300 acres, the largest solid body of orcharding in the world so cut up. A present population of 50 to 60 people. Thirty Eastern families (mostly of Chicago) who have bought, whose orchards are growing (being cared for by us.) and who move on, to and take possession of them in the spring of 1896. Seventy additional families who have purchased under similar conditions, and who take possession of their orchards in the spring of 1897. Many more families who go out the following spring. A $3000 guest house, with bathroom, tolletroom, hot and cold water on second floor, many minor buildings, a postofice, a Sunday-school, a day school, water delivered in steel underground pressure pipes to each resident, six miles of boulevard and 17 miles of streets. This is the result of two years' persistent work in building the finest colony in all California, where we have the greatest natural advantages of anything to natural advantages of anything to natural advantages our success has been than has ever been achieved in any other location in California in the same length of time. Our work is nearly finished, and in our Western home, surrounded by people on whom we believe we have conferred a permanent blessing, the people who have secured an annuity for life; improvements which we have instituted, we soon expect to enjoy the fruits of our labors. We cannot afford to sell our remaining holdings for any less money, but to hurry the time of our departure and to be on the balance of our holdings, making it easier than ever to secure a footing in the "Tand of Sunshine."

"I sell the earth."

Fureks, I have found it! Eureka, do you want it? I'll tell you what, I've fou d a man, an old gentlemen it was years old; now there is nothing special abouts dings any number of old gentlemen in this country; but hold on, let me tell you, this old gentlemen has property scattered all over this broad domain of Uncle Sam's from hither to yon. His home is in Chicago and he wans to concentrate his property, and he came to me yesterday and said he was going to dispase of ail lis grop. ry; g.s. it transfer. d into cash, mortgages, or first-class Cricage property, even at scriftoe. I'll tell you what he has here, located about 4 miles northwest of Comona and about 1½ miles northwest of Claromont (the college town) which is on the Santa Fe R.R.; about 1½ miles northwest of Fe Mona 24-year-old trees this spring, good cement ditch all along north side; street row of palm olives and roses; streets on two sides; now this old gentleman dropped in here '4 years ago from Chicago and he said: '19 gosh, I never saw a finer spot in my life; the grand old mountains with snowcapped peak of 0.d Baldy looming up just a few miles to the north, the valley spreading out in an extensive panorama to the east, south and west." (Let me say right here that this is where the old gentleman showed his good sense and mature judgment.—9d.j "I am going to have an orange grave right here." said he, and to think smade and set out the whole business before returning to Chicago. This increhard has had the cement ditches made and set out the whole business before returning to Chicago. This increhard has had best of care. Now the orchard is just coming into bearing, but he has tired of it and don't want to be tothered looking after it, and he says it must go. It cent he says "that makes no difference. It don't want it; sell it of $450 per acre. Let some other man have the benefit. I've got a plen

FOR SALE — $65,000; THE FAMOUS Rancho Jamul, located about 20 miles southeast of San Diego and about 6 miles from the reast of San Diego and about 6 miles from the rest railroad. According to the repointed by the court, the ranch is classified as follows:

First—About 3000 seres of rich valley land.

Second—About 2000 acres low mesa land, especially adapted to the successful growth of the orange and lemon.

Third—About 1750 acres rolling land.
Fourth—About 1100 acres grazing and mineral land. This rancho has for the past 18 years been in litigation, which is now terminated, making the title absolutely perfect and a sale possible.

The appraised value of this property by carcully-selected appraisers of the court was $148,000; the property is now offered at the great reduction of price, namely $65,000, or less than one-half its appraised value.

It is our object to solicit the investiga—we can substantiate all statements made we can substantiate all statements made regarding it. I have upon exhibition in my office, maps and other data of the property. Full information given upon application to WALTER E. BROWN,

BUSINESS

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

OFFICE OF THE TIMES,
LOS ANGELES, March 16, 1895.
The bank clearings of Los Angeles last week amounted to $1,187,384, as compared with $974,790 for the corresponding week with $974,790 for the corresponding week of the previous year.

In the clearances of the chief cities of the United States for the previous week, as telegraphed from New York and published in The Times of yesterday, Los Angeles shows within a fraction of the same amount of increase as the country at large, the figures being 5.1 and 5.7, respectively. The total clearances of Los Angeles for that week, $1,289,304, were considerably ahead of the figures reported by Portland, Or., which had only a little over $1,000,000, although it showed an increase of 28 per cent. over the previous year. Tacoma is now scarcely "in it" at place only amounting to $529,540.

The steady manner in which the bank clearances of Los Angeles field up is very encouraging, and proves that the claim of exceptional prosperity which is made for this city is well founded.

COMMERCIAL

The outlook for California wine contin ues to improve. It is true that the im-provement in prices which has been noted in the northern part of the State, conse-quent upon the formation of an asso-ciation, has not yet been observed in quent upon the formation of an association, has not yet been observed in Southern California, but it is only a matter of time until the improvement up north will spread in this direction.

Meantime, the merits of California wines, which have been so much ignored in the United States, are being made known in Europe in a very effective manner. Charles J. Murphy, the representative in Europe of the United States Agricultural Department, writes to the New York Sun that he has succeeded in securing a gold medal for California wines at the Antwerp exposition, even though the jury of awards had adjourned and was obliged to reconvene to pass on the California exhibit, which did not arrive until two weeks after the jury had separated.

The result of this award, says Mr. Murphy, has been the ordering of several carloads of wine direct from California and the opening of agencies in Brussels and Antwerp. In Hamburg and Bremen agencies had been established, and in the United Kingdom and even in Scandinavia and Holland Mr. Murphy found a considerable and increasing demand for the product of California vineyards, especially in the ordinary grades of wine.

No class of producers in the State have had harder luok during the past few years than the wine men, and it is about time that there should be a turn of the tide in their direction.

If reports from the northern part of the State are not exaggerated, the deciduous fruit men of Southern California should find a good market for their product. The loss in the neighborhood of Varaville alone by the frost is considered to amount to a quarter of a million dollars, while around Stockton a large amount of damage has been done. Reports from Napa county are also of a discouraging chafacter to the growers there. The fruits that have been injured include early plums and peaches, grapes, almonds, apricots and cherries. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good." The hortleulturiets of Southern California certainly have cause to congratulate themselves this year.

Articles of incorporation were filed with the County Clerk yesterday by the Cucamonga Land and Irrigation Company, formed for the purpose of acquiring at Cucamonga and its vicinity, in San Bernardino county, real and personal property, water rights, etc.. Capital stock, $50,000; fully subscribed. Board of directors, I. W. Hellman, H. W. Hellman, Peter D. Martin, Max Meyberg and Ozro W. Childs.

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS.

The Times has referred on several occaextension of oil development within the city as a hardship. The following communi-cation has been received from a citizen who signs himself "Fair Play," representing the other side of the question:

"I notice that several gentlemen are protesting against the further extension of the oil district, particularly in the vicinity

the oil district, particularly in the vicinity of the Belmont grounds. One gentleman speaks of the development as encroaching upon the territory where there are fine houses, etc., and for that reason the industry should go no further.

"Now, I would ask, is a rich man who owns a fine house damaged as much as the poor man who has a cheap cottage and that house is all his worldly possessions?

"These are the facts in regard to the oil industry in the developed as well as prospective districts: More than three-fourths of the people in the district want prospective districts: More than three-fourths of the people in the district want the business to continue, and are willing for the further development of the same. Why? Because their property is enhanced in value by the rich production of oil, and, in many instances, they see and are now realizing an income.

"It is a fact that there are fifty-foot lots even at the present low price of oil, pay-ing as large dividends as the same frontage in the heart of Spring street improved business property.

"In regard to the Belmont grounds, the Witmer brothers have held that property for more than eight years without a dollar income. Now, suppose that the grounds and addeant property are rich in oil deand adjacent property are rich in oil de-posit, it would not be unreasonable to es-timate an income of $100,000 annually from timate an income of $100,000 annually from the Belmont grounds alone, and there is but one building on the premises. The oil territory is owned mostly by people who cannot afford to let this mine of wealth remain undeveloped under their very homes. I say let the best and greatest industry Los Angeles owns go right along, and if there be no cil near my opulent neighbor's house, let the boys blow off steam and get out."

In the new Wilson Block on Broadway, between Fourth and Fifth streets, an elevator has just been fitted up which is interesting, as it is a new invention by a citizen of Los Angeles. Instead of being run by hydraulic power the elevator is worked by electricity, the dynamo being carried beneath the floor of the elevator. This new elevator is said to be absolutely safe, as, should it ever start to fall it would be stopped automatically. A great saving in expense is effected, as the services of an engineer is unnecessary. If this elevator should prove to be a success many other new buildings will probably adopt the same system.

supply was utilized last summer to run a small fruit evaporator. Gas has been struck in two other holes in the neighborhood. Eastern experts have been astonished at the force of the supply, notwithstanding the leakage, and say that there must be a large and valuable deposit of natural gas in the neighborhood.

NEW YORK MARKETS. Shares and Money.

lation was fairly active for Saturday and gen lation was fairly active for Saturday and generally strong in tone, the improvement being mainly due to purchases for the short account, although there were some rumors that room traders were buying for a rise. London houses were again in the market as sellers of St. Paul, which, however, received strong local support and gained \(\frac{1}{2} \) on the day. The market opened in good tone and while there were declines in some shares the trend of prices was mostly in the other direction. In the late dealings there was immediate realizing, but the market closed rection. Flow of Wit and Wine.

The Toasts.

The Builders' Exchange banquet at the Hollenbeck Cafe was the first of the kind ever held in Los Angeles. There were present nearly one bundred members of the exchange and their guests, including contractors, architects and material men.

John Rebman, president of the exchange, occupied the head of the table. At his right sat Octavius Morgan, president of the Architects' Chapter, and Charles L. Strange, City Superintendent of Buildings, special guests of the exchange. Capt. A. F. Mackay, who acted as toastmaster, sat to the left of President Rebman. J. P. Stocksdale was chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, and to his ex-cellent management was due the unqual-ified success of the banquet. The menu, which was an excellent one was as follows:

Vermouth Cocktail.
Oysters on Shell.
Olives. Mock Turtle Soup.
Celery. Sherry.
Brolled Salmon.
Potato Croquettes. Wetmore's Sauterne.
Roast Turkey, Cranberry Sauce.
Wetmore's Claret.
Sweet Potatoes.
Roman Punch.
Brolled Chicken. Julienne Potatoes.
Champagne.
Lobster Salad.
Plum Pudding, Brandy Sauce.
Vanilla Ice Cream.

Vermouth Cocktail.

After the bill of fare had been properly discussed, Capt. Mackay introduced Octavius Morgan, president of the Architects' Chapter, who made a brief address. W. S. Daubenspeck, the architect, responded briefly to the toast, "The Ladies."

John Llewellyn and William Pugh sang a duet, "The Larboard Watch," and "The Old Oaken Buoket!" was sung by a chorus. Superintendent of Buildings Strange responded briefly when called on for a speech.

Anthon Swensen, one of the directors of the exchange, made the speech of the evening, dwelling in glowing terms on the future of Los Angeles, and calling on builders to take pride in their profession and build so that their work would be a monument to them long after they were present, was called found responded with some interesting remitecences.

J. P. Stocksdale of the L. W. Blim Lumber Company made very neat and witty speech, in respue to vociferous calls to hear from him.

J. H. Preston made t last speech of the evening, giving some good advice his fellow-craftsmen and ose in the effiliated trades.

The Mayor's Veto.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT OF BOILER INSPECTION ORDINANCE.

The Mayor has filed for presentation to the City Council a message in which he states that he returns without his approval the ordinance providing that boilers which are regularly inspected by insurance companies under certain conditions shall not be subjected to inspection by the shall not be subjected to inspection by the City Boller Inspector.

The Mayor gives his reasons for the veto as follows:

"It is the province of the city government in all matters pertaining particularly to city affairs and control to protect so far as is possible by municipal legislation the lives and property of the people. The object of the ordinance which it is now proposed to amend is the protection of the citizens of Los Angeles from the danger of boiler explosions by an ordinace requiring an inspection of every boiler in the city by the city boller inspector.

"The purpose of sec. 3½ of the amend-

"The purpose of sec. 3,2 of the amendment to the ordinance is to exempt from such inspection by the city inspector all boilers which are insured by a guarantee boiler inspection company or other insurance company maintaining a regular corps of inspectors of its own. Inasmuch as ance company maintaining a regular corps of inspectors of its own. Inasmuch as the proper inspection of boilers is a matter that closely concerns the lives and welfare of many of our people, it does not seem to me that the city should wholly abdicate its rights in favor of any private corporation whose interests are as much of a peculiary nature as they are a responsibility to the owner. The insurance companies are residents of other cities, and their inspectors are in no way responsible to the city, nor can the city control them or require the work to be done in any particular manner in compliance with the requirements of the ordinance.

"I am informed that the insurance companies make four inspections per year of each boiler that they insure. If the ordinance could be so amended that at least one of these four inspections should be made, but the sity insurance on the sections are considered.

of these four inspections should be made by the city inspector, I am of the opinion that it would meet with hearty approval, and also find hearty indorsement among the owners of bodiers themselves. Such a requirement would surely be within the bounds of reason, and ought to be insisted upon by the city authorities.

"The expense of having one inspection by a city official would be no greater than by a city official would be no greater than if made by an inspector of the insurance company's own chosing. With the other three inspections exacted by the insurance the ordinance need not interfere, but the city should require that at least one in-spection should be made by its own in-the ordinance need not interfere, but the city should require that at least one inspection should be made by its own inspector, who is accountable to the city for the faithful performance of his duty.

"The first interest to be served by the ordinance is safety to the people. The periodical inspection by the city inspector adds to that safety by another man's eyes, another man's judgment, other than the one selected by the insurance company, whose employees have no particular interest in the work beyond retaining their staces in the faithful performance of their duty. I am therefore of the opinion that the city ought not, in justice to itself as a municipal corporation, and to the safety of its people, relinquish its supervision over any boiler in the city. The evident purpose of the ordinance is to make the Board of Engineers self-sustaining out of the fees received from boiler inspections and licenses to engineers. The exemption of any number of boilers from the penalties of the ordinance would certainly have a tendency to cripple the service by reducing the income of the board below its actual expenses.

"The amendments to see, 3 providing for tendency to cripple the service by reduc-ing the income of the board below its act-ual expenses.

"The amendments to sec. 3 providing for a reduction of the renewal fees of engi-neers to 31 seems to be just and proper, and could be adopted without injury to the service or detriment to the other provi-sions of the ordinance."

noon in the matter of the appointment of a meat and milk inspector and the amending of existing ordinances in such a manner as would give him power to properly carry out the intentions of the health department in the matter of sanitary regulations. All the members of the board were present.

Dr. Salisbury stated that he believed there ought to be some provision so that, when meat in a butcher shop is found to be bad, it could be so treated that it would be impossible to grind it into sausage or otherwise dispose of it in such a manner that there would be opportunity to sell be bad, it could be so treated that it would be impossible to grind it into sausage or otherwise dispose of it in such a manner that there would be opportunity to sell it for human food. He thought it would be a good idea to pour coal oil on ft, for after that had been done it would be impossible undoubtedly to treat the meat in such a way that it would be palatable. It was also talked of that the meat inspector should, in some manner, be given the authority to make inspections outside the city, where most of the butchering is done, and where nearly all the milk for use in the city is obtained. It was expressed as the sense of the board that the meat and milk inspector quight to be appointed a deputy county inspector of stock and sworn in as a deputy sherif. This would clothe him with the proper authority to examine mest to be slaughtered for city consumption, as well as dairies furnishing milk for city use, but located outside the city.

"I want to pay a peddler's license for the months of November and December, 1893," said G. W. Snow to Deputy Wilde in the City Clerk's office yesterday.

"Yes; that's right," said Mr. Snow. "I ran a peddler's wagon for those months and I did not pay any license for it, as required by the law of your city. I thought the license was an unjust one and did not pay it. It has been on my mind ever since, and the Lord would not let me rest till I had squared it."
Two licenses for $5 each for the months named were made out for the man, and he went away, apparently very much relieved for having paid his conscience vent away, apparently very mu-leved for having paid his con-

The Hill-street Regrading.

Mayor Rader stated yesterday that it would probably be two or three weeks yet before the commissioners for the changing of the grade of Hill street between Rock street and Bellevue would be able to file their report. The district, he explained, which is to be assessed for the payment of damages if any there be, is a large one and, after the commissioners have decided on what damages shall be allowed in the cases under consideration it will require a good deal of time in which to make the assessment.

The commissioners in this case, it will be remembered, are the Mayor, the Street Superintendent and the City Engineer.

The City Engineer has just had com-pleted in his office a map showing the lo-cations of the various streets of the city cations of the various streets of the city and the official names of all those streets as corrected down to date. Such a map is valuable by reason of the importance in preparing ordinances for street work that the official names of the streets on which work is proposed to be done should be stated. In one or two instances it has occurred that the names of streets as stated in the ordinances were the names by which the streets were known and not the which the streets were known and not the official names. As a result of such errors it was necessary in each case to abandon proceedings and institute new proceedings with the official names correctly stated.

The Courts.

THREE MORE OPINIONS HANDED DOWN BY THE SUPREME COURT. DOWN BY THE SUPREME COURT.

Three more opinions relating to cases appealed from this district, in which water questions were involved, were received from the Supreme Court by the local officers yesterday for filing in this city. The cases they relate to are as follows:

J. L. Holley (appellant) vs. the County of Orange and Royal L. Freeman (respondents) action to recover money paid under protest by plaintiff, pursuant to sec. 3819 of the Political Code, as amended in 1893.

Plaintiff, as the owner of certain lands in what is known as the Boisa Drainage Ditch District, was assessed to pay the costs of locating a ditch, paid the sum under protest, and then presented a claim for the tax so paid to the Board of Su-pervisors, which rejected said claim. The general demurrer to plaintiff scomplaint being sustained, plaintiff declined to amend, whereupon judgment of dismissal was entered, from which plaintiff ap-pealed. Appellant contends that the as-sessment was invalid, because the act unpealed. Appeliant contenus the act un-sessment was invalid, because the act un-der which it was levied and collected was unconstitutional, and because the "act to provide a system of drainage for agri-cultural, swamp and overflow lands, etc.," cultural, swamp and overflow lands, etc., or at least so much of it as authorized the Board of Supervisors to levy an assessment, without first submitting the question to a vote of the electors of the district, was repealed by the County Government Act of 1883.

The Supreme Court holds that neither of these points can be maintained, and therefore affirms the judgment.

Lee H. Utt (respondent) vs. John Frey (appellant;) action to quiet plaintiff's title to the water of the San Luis Rey River and its tributaries, and more particularly the water of Paubal Creek, and a certain ditch taking water therefrom, known as the Ardillo Ditch, in San Diego county. Judgment was entered establishing the right of plaintiff to the Ardillo Ditch, and to the prior right to the use of twenty-

Judgment was entered establishing the right of plaintiff to the Ardillo Ditch, and to the prior right to the use of twenty-five inches of water of said Paubal Creek during the irrigation season of each year, viz, from April 1 to November 1.

Defendant appeals from the judgment and from an order denying his motion for a new trial; but the Supreme Court affirms both judgment and order.

Shenandoah Mining and Milling Company (respondent) vs. A. C. Morgan et al., (appellants) action to enjoin defendants from interfering with plaintiff's alleged right to take water from the Sycamore Springs for the use of its mine and mill in San Diego county. Findings and judgment were for the plaintiff, and defendants appeal from said judgment and an order denying their motion for a new triel.

The judgment and order appealed from are reversed and a new trial granted, for the reason that the complaint did not justify the finding of a grant based upon the paper received in evidence, which should have been excluded.

THE CHAIN-GANG QUESTION.

The chain-gang question has once more found its way into the courts. Hugh J. Crawford, Esq., who was the other day denied the right to interview a prisoner in charge of the captain of the chain gang, yesterday applied to Judge Shaw of the Superior Court for a writ of habeas corpus in the care of N. P. Brady, his client, who is doing time for the city. Mr. Crawford, in his affidavit applying for the writ, alleges that Brady is allegally restrained of his liberty by a person not under the jurisdiction of the Chief of Police, but is an employee of the street department of this city. The affidavit also states that he was remanded to the custody of the Chief of Police, and is therefore illegally restrained from bing placed in the custody of a party outside of the Chief's jurisdiction; that he is subject to inhuman and unjust treatment by reason of being obliged to wear an "Oregon boot," a contrivance which is docked upon the ankle, and weighing about twenty pounds, all of which is contrary to the law of the land.

A writ was issued, returnable before Judge Shaw in Department Five of the Superior Court, on Friday, March 23. The proceedings are expected to settle the question whether a prisoner given into the custody of the Chief of Police, can be turned over to any other person outside of the Chief's jurisdiction. Judge Lucien Shaw yesterday morning rendered his decision in the case of A. L. Sanchez vs. Emeline Childs et al., an action to quiet title to a lot in the O. W.

tion to quiet title to a lot in the O. W. Childs tract, judgment being ordered for the defendants therein, for the reasons set forth in the following brief opinion: "I am of the opinion that O. W. Childs acquired his title to the land in controversy by adverse possession, consisting of actual occupation or possessio pedis under claim of title, beginning back as far as the spring of, or summer of, 1880, at least. This was before plaintiff's mother died. The statute of limitacions having been set going before her death was not suspended during plaintiff's minority. Hence plaintiff has no interest.

"The objections made byplaintiff to defendants' evidence, not ruled on at the trial, are sustained, and those made by defendants to evidence offered by plaintiff, and not decided, are overruled." SELF-CONVICTED BURGLARS.

Thomas Murphy and William Hayes were luly arraigned upon the charge of burglary duly arraigned upon the charge of burglary preferred against them respectively in De-partment One yesterday morning, and each, after waiving his legal rights, entered his plea of guilty thereto. The former was thereupon sentenced to Folsom peniten-tiary for the term of two years; but the latter was remanded until Monday morn-ing.

SENTENCED TO SAN QUENTIN. In Department One yesterday morning Juan Mendoza was duly arranged by Judge preferred against him by Sebastian Aloitre of San Gabriel, who accused him of the theft of a horse on February 25 last. After waiving all his legal rights in the premises, Mendoza entered his plea of guilty to the charge, whereupon he was sentenced to imprisonment in the State prison at San Quentin for the term of two years.

Milling the Ore—Stamp Mills and Their Cost—How the Mill is Constructed and How

[From a Special Contributor.]

When a miner, the erstwhile prospector, gets his claim sufficiently developed to justify a mill, one is put up as speedily Countless devices have been old California stamp-mill remains at head of the procession. These mills built in batteries, usually of five ups each, and ordinarily at first the mill consists of one battery only, but is so arranged that additional batteries may be placed in position when the mine is found to warrant the expenditure. The price of the mill is usually estimated at so much per stamp, usually costing about $1000 per stamp by the time the mill is ready to begin crushing ore. Of course, the cost depends upon the difficulty at-tendant upon getting the mill to the mine and also upon the weight of the stamps, which run from two hundred and fifty up to nine hundred and fifty pounds each. A medium-weight stamp, about seven hundred and fifty pounds, is most commonly up to nine hundred and fifty pounds each. A medium-weight stamp, about seven hundred and fifty pounds, is most commonly used, and is suitable for crushing almost any class of ore. This estimate of so much per stamp includes the boilers and cargines, amalgamating plates and all that is necessary to handle free milling ore. Each battery consists of a large integral cast-iron mortar, having a rectangular bed, within which the "dies" are arranged. The dies each consist of a square base, having upon its top a cylindrical projection, which is just the diameter of the stamp, and is arranged to receive the blow from its respective stamp. A layer of sand or ore is placed in the bottom of the mortar before the dies are placed in position, in order to form a cushion to prevent the blows from the stamps breaking the mortar. The mortar is cast with a heavy frame above it, samewhest like a basket with an exceedingly heavy handle, and in this frame are gridewayers. Stillad play a reversal of the operation by which the cam shaft, which is provided with one cam for each stamp. These cams are shaped somewhat like a very heavy, strong sickle, and are from eight to four-teen inches in length; the handle end is provided with an opening, through which the cam shaft passee, and a key secures it rigidly in place.

The stamp stems are round shafts of iron, and in a battery of 750-pound stamps is about four inches in diameter, and about one foot in length when new. This shoe shamp stems above the cam shaft and in the pshih of its respective cam; is keyed a cast base, having as ocket, in wirth fits the stem of the stamp stem above the cam shaft and in the pshih of its respective cam; is keyed a collar original at least the stamp drown and in the pshih of the rear shaft each cam ending the form a woman's point of view—so a collar original at least the stamp drown the collar original at least the stamp drow seem with its respective tappost and life the rich method and the came power from the particle of the second of the control of water is kept constantly flowing into the battery, and as the stamps pound the over to powder it mixes with the water, and that ore which is fine enough passes with the water through the screen and down the aluice to the "tailing" or "slum" pond. Nearly all the free gold is amalgamated by the quicksilver on the plates in the battery, but what little is not catches on the "apron." Plate, and if the ore is rich soon small hard white lumps begin to appear on the apron. When this occurs the mill man knows that the quicksilver on the plates in the battery has taken up all the gold it will hold, and he begins to "feed the battery" by throwing in a small quantity of quicksilver to amalgamate the gold in the battery. The amalgam gathers on the battery plates, and as soon as hard amalgam begins to show on the apron more "quick" as it is called by the mill men, is fed to the battery.

If too much "quick" is fed to the battery it splashes out through the screen and softens the amalgam on the apron until truns freely, and when this occurs no more "quick" is fed to the battery until the amalgam on the apron again gets hard and firm.

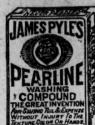

The richness of the ore can be pretty accurately gauged by the amount of "quick" it calls for. In ordinary free-milling ore two ounces of "quick" will amalgamate one ounce of "quick" will amalgamate one ounce of "quick".

Each stamp should crush one ton of ore in ten hours; if the battery takes ten ounces of "quick" is fed by means of a small spoon, which holds about as much as a child's thimble, or one ounce of "quick."

Each stamp should crush one ton of ore in ten hours; if the battery takes ten ounces of "quick" is the ore crushed during that time (one-half ton) contained about five ounces of gold, worth usually about $17 per ounce; thus the ore would mill about $170 per ton.

All gold bullion is not of the same fineness. That is to say, as the gold comes from the ore it is mixed with baser metals, such as silver and copper, and the value of the gold bullion depends upon the amount of the s

Upon those davs when we did not visit the mine one glance at the faces of the "bovs" as they returned from the shaft told how the day's work had progressed, and what were the prospects of a bonanza. True, it required an intimate acquaintance with the faces in question, and a versatile knowledge of the language of, expression to penetrace the masks of red oxide of fron, or in other words iron rust, which they wore. This red dust decorated everything in the vicinity. Occasionally we had a visitor, perhaps an old prospector, on another search for hidden treasures, and full of reminiscences of former trips and life in the mountains; perhaps one of the other two women in camp, with her fancy-work and eager for news from the outside world. So situated, away from the petty gossips of country towns, or the driving care and worry of nineteenth-century clife, imbued with this spirit of helpfulness, sharing the disappointments and encouraging the hopes of the husband, who now is also comrade and boon companion, a woman must grow in all respects braver, stronger and better, and more in harmony with her Maker. But her vitality must be strong, who can withstand the rigors of a winter in the mountains.

tannery of J. D. Grank & Co. He gladly accepted such employment a year or two before the outbreak of the war. He received at first $40 a month, and his pay was afterward raised to $75. He hired a little-cottage, still standing, and paid $12 a month rent, leaving a sum upon which he could support his family only by scrimping and the hardest sort of economy. Upon stormy days or times when customers were few and idle moments plenty, the young men used to go into the tanner's store and there they often found young Capt. Grant seated upon the counter sometimes, with an old gray coat that cost $5 on his shoulders, a very rusty felt hat upon his head, and a short pipe in his mouth. He was known also as a clerk who had no special fondness for the courter or for hides hut who would rather sit.

bench and smoking a pipe and looking almost the picture of despair. The gayly-dressed young soldiers brushed by, some of them turning for an instant to glance at this man who seemed almost like an outcast, so strong was the contrast between his appearance and theirs. Capi. Chetlain recognized him, although he had not seen him for a day or two, and going up to him said: "Why, captain, what are you doing here?"

"Well, I am trying to get my letter of introduction to Gov. Yates, and I have been waiting so long that I don't know as it will be of any use. However, I am going to stay here until the building closes."

Capt. Chetlain saw that Grant was a little despondent, and suggested to him that the Governor was very busy, but that he would sooner or later be sure to receive any one who bore a letter from Congressman Washburne. Two or three hours later Capt. Grant was able to find some one who condescended to take the letter of introduction from Mr. Washburne to the Governor, and after a while this messenger returned, saying that the Governor would see Capt. Grant as soon as he had leisure. The Governor's room with what seemed to be almost a timid manner, and the Governor, casting a quick glance at him and perceiving that he was coarsely dressed and also shy, clearly made up his mind that he would make the interview a short one. So he said: "Ah, you are Capt. Grant. What can I do for you?"

"Well Governor L have come to see if Saying nothing Grant turned back to his work. That evening he met Capt. netrain and told Sim that he had decided to remain in Springfield a little while longer, but that he had got to practice the strictest economy in order to support himself. Then he made a suggestion. Said he:

"I can't live at the hotel any longer; it costs too much. But I have found a room right across the street. It is of good size and has a double bed in it. The price is $3 a week. Now, if you will come and share the room, it will cost us only $1.50 a week apiece, and we can get our meals where we can find them."

GRANT'S MONEY GIVES OUT.

GRANT'S MONEY GIVES OUT. Capt. Chetlain agreed to this proposition and that evening he became Capt. Grant's room-mate, and remained with him until and that evening he became Capt. Grant's room-mate, and remained with him until the company was mustered into the service and joined its regiment. Capt. Grant must have lived very plainly at that time. He did not complain, but there is some reason to believe that he now and then skipped a meal and when he did eat he bought the plainest food. He went to the State Capitol every day, and returned every evening more and more despondent. Twice he decided to go to Galena. Once he determined to go by the next train, and it was only after the most urgent pleading of Chetiain that he changed his mind and decided to remain a few days longer.

At last one day he came to Capt. Chetlain in camp and said to him: "They have asked me to go down to Mattoon and look after a regiment which is going into camp there," and then he also confessed that his money had so completely given out that he would be unable to take the trip unless some friend would advance him no more than $15. That little sum was found, and Grant went down to Mattoon and spent a day or two with the new regiment, giving its officers such advantage as his own experience enabled him to do. He returned to Springfield and again there was a time of delay, But after a little, owing to some disappointment or inefficiency somewhere, $it was found necessary to send some one competent to do the work to Mattoon again, to muster that regiment in, and Capt. Grant was sent upon that service. He came back from Mattoon feeling somewhat encouraged, but found that his service had entitled him to no recognition.

GRANT'S SERVICES DECLINED IN

Thinking that there might be an op-portunity in St. Louis he went there, and Thinking that there might be an opportunity in St. Louis he went there, and although he met one or two old army comrades and even rode with them when they set out to disperse a hostile demonstration, nevertheless he found no encouragement that Missouri would accept his services. Returning to Springfield and again almost determined to go to his home, he happened to think of McClellan, who was then in Cincinnati preparing to leave for the front. He knew McClellan slightly and was certain that McClellan knew of him. But in Cincinnati he faced the same indifference and bad luck. McClellan had just gone to Washington but his brilliantly-uniformed staff were in and about the hotel and there was no offer of comradeship when Capt. Grant timidly introduced himself to two or three of them. There was nothing to do but to return to Springfield, and on his way hither he stopped over for a day in Indianapolis, thinking that perhaps his services might he accepted by Gov. Morton. A few liodirs there—showed him plainly that the political colonels and political influences were quite as strong in Indiana as they were in Illinois. Then his mind was made up. He went to Springfield, bade Capt. Chetlain good-by, and then returned a despondent man to his home in Galeña, believing that for the time at least there was no chance for an obscure military man, since the politicians were making the officers for the regiments and brigades.

he expected. He had sown good seed at Mattoon. The ability, enrgy and thorugh understanding of himself and his duties which he displayed when mustering in the Twenty-first Regiment of Illinois Volunteers made a deep impression upon some of the officers and many of the men. For some reason the first appointed colonel of that regiment resigned and at that time the officers of a regiment had the privilege of designating by vate their wishes as to the coloneley. These officers met, and among them was a Capt. Patterson, who afterwards was an able judge in one of the Illinois districts. During the discussion Capt. Patterson suggested that they vote for the election of that Capt. Grant who had mustered the regiment in, and the idea was received with instant favor. A vote was taken and the proposition was carried, and a petition setting forth these facts was sent Gov. Yates.

A few days later Capt. Grant, sitting in his father's leather store, received a telegram from Gov. Yates asking him if he would accept an appointment as colonel of the Twenty-first Regiment. Accept the appointment! Would an eagle fly if it had the chance? Grant telegraphed back instantly that he would gladly command the regiment, and as soon as possible went again to Springfield. He received his commission and joined the regiment, was discipline was immediately made apparent. Yet Grant was

ON A CUBAN PLANTATION.

SOME OF THE GREAT SUGAR MILLS IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF CIENFUEGOS.

Two Plantations that Produce Annually 64,000,000 Pounds Sweetness-A Fleet of One Hundred Ships in Waiting-The Various Processes of Manufacture-Life on a Great Sugar Estate.

(From a Special Contributor.)

A day spent on a Cuban sugar plantation is ! something to be treasured in memory as one of the pleasurable experiences of a Hierime. There are few articles of daily which the consumer is less familfar with its methods of production than is the case with sugar. Everybody knows in a general way that it is the evaporated of the sugar cane, but beyond this fact few know anything of the intricate processes through which the sap must pass before it appears in a condition fit for table

Cientuegos is the great center of the sugar plantations of Cuba. Here are two plantations—the Consuelo and the Sole-dad—the total annual production of which dad—the total annual production of which amounts to over sixty-four million pounds—an average of one pound each for every man, woman and child in the United States. As the smaller plantations in the neighborhood of Cientuegos have an annual output of many million pounds more, it is not surprising that there is frequently a fleet of 100 ships lying in the harbor awalting cargoes.

it is not surprising that there is frequently a fleet of 100 ships lying in the harbor awaiting cargoes.

Formerly the Cuban planters did not follow the process of sugar-making further than the conversion of the sap into molasses, producing a quality of the sprup known in the trade as "boiling molasses;" that is, molasses intended for conversion into sugar and not for table use in syrup form. Recently, however, the Cuban planters have found it profitable to erect mills, and today sugar-raising in Cuba is reduced to a science. The making of sugar, as now practiced, requires extensive and costly plants fully equipped with the most intricate and expensive machinery, and requires a much larger capital than in the old times, when the chief requisites for a sugar mill was a pair of heavy rollers, crudely operated, for crushing the cane. A plantation fully equipped to produce 5,000,000 pounds of sugar annually, now represents an investment of nearly half a million dollars. The smaller planters could not compete with the large ones were it not that the large amount of capital required has led to the division of sugar-making into planting and manuscrituring. It is only she very largest and weakthest planters that carry on both branches of the industry on their plantations. The desire on the part of the small planters to manufacture their cane has led capitalists to invest in what have been known as "centrals." These are mills capitalists to invest in what have been known as "centrals." These are mills erected in some central locality—hence erected in some central locality—hence the name-within easy hauling distance of the plantations. These "centrals" are the small planter's salvation. Without them he could not compete with his wealthy neighbor, and would be driven out of business. The usual method of operating a "central" is on a percentage basis. The planter delivers his canse to the mill and receives a percentage of the sugar obtained. Other mills buy the cane at so much per cord.

It was nearly three centuries ago that the first sugar plantation was started in Cuba. For 250 years very little progress was misle, beyond, extending the area of the plantations. The processes was made beyond extending the area of the plantations. The processes were crude and necesserily wasteful. Oxen were employed in grinding cane and the machinery used was of the simplest construction. It was not until about fifteen years ago that the Cubans made much attempt at reducing the work to a science, but in that time great progress has been made, until today Cuba can show some of the most expensive, best-operated and most profitable mills in the world.

operated and most prontable mills in the world.

The common people of Cuba have passed from slavery to freedom and today, all-things considered, the Cuban negroes are the best-paid set of people of their class on the face of the earth. They live quite as well and as cheaply as our Southern negroes, and are in active demand at good wages. On the steamer from Nassau to Cienfuegos I met several Cuban planters, who expressed themselves as anxious to engage a number of experienced "plantation" negroes at $2 a day for a period of twelve months. This season experienced plantation labor has been difficult to secure at any price. The crop has been unusually large, and the various son experienced plantation labor has been difficult to secure at any price. The crop has been unusually large, and the various other industries that have recently been started, notably the iron mines at Santago de Cuba, have created a demand for laborers in other than the cane fields, and the influx of immigrants has not kept pace with the times. The Spanish government has tried several schemes to stimulate emigration to Cuba, but none have been successful in attracting desirable immisuccessful any great numbers. The average of the street successful in the several numbers are successful in any great numbers.

successful in attracting desirable immigrants in any great numbers. The average Spaniard looks upon Cuba as his legitimate "government pap," and only goes there as a soldier or official. He regards the Cuban as his semi-slave, created only to labor for the Spaniard. To go as a laborer is furthest from the Spaniard's idea of Cuba. He must go either as a gentleman or a brigand.

The past season has been a very prosperous one for small and large plantations alike. It is in the bad seasons that the small plantations suffer most. The amount received from the "central" for the crop of cane does not represent so much clear profit by any means. The raising of sugar cane and its conversion into sugar is now carried on on just as close a margin as the cotton, boot-and-shoe, or any other of the great industries of the United States. It is only by the employment of the most approved methods and strict economy in manufacturing that there is even the slimmest margin of profit.

It is at Soledad plantation that the high-of profit.

It is at Soledad plantation that the highest perfection in economic sugar-making has been reached. This plantation ranks as the best-inanaged and its mills as the most expensive on the island of Cuba, if not in the world. It is not the largest plantation by any means, as the Consuloproduces two and one-half times the number of pounds annually, but here American methods are followed and even improved upon, and the management looks after every-economy as closely, as the cottoin mill-owner of Massachusetts watches every spindle in his inill for waste.

To reach Soledad, I take a small steam launch from Cienfuegos during the early moorning hours. As we steam along past the many islands that dot the harbor and serve as, summer residences for the wealthy Cubans, the scene is even more enchanting than a sail through the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence or among the more rugged islands that dot the placid waters of Puget Sound. The delightful sail is continued a few miles up the most picturesque of little rivers, where we disembark and take a short railroad ride, which lands me at the sugar works and plantation house. I am here met by Mr. Murray, the manager of Soledad. I had been told by Mr. Williams, the Consul-General, that if there is any one on the island of Cuba who can run a sugar plantation profitably it is Mr. Murray, and this in face of the fact that Mr. Williams is not inclined to look upon sugar-raising in Cuba as being a profitable industry.

narrow-gauge milroads run to the cane-fields and the cane is loaded direct into the cars, drawn to the mills and unloaded onto a broad carrier traveling up a long incline and fed to the rollers of the great onto a broad carrier traveling up a long incline and fed to the rollers of the great mill.

Outle an army is employed in cutting and loading the cars, but so expeditiously is the work carried on that the juice of the cane which we see being cut this morning will be boiling in the vacuum pans before 3 p.m. The cutting of the cane is doffer with an instrument that looks like a compromise between a sword and an overgrown butcher-knife. The blade is about three feet long, with a big wooden handle from six to eight inches in length. The blade is one-fourth inch or more in thickness along the back, and the only portion that is cangerously sharp is a few inches at the point. The cahe-cutters carry their big knives with them on all occasions during the cutting season. Meet him where you will, at the cafe, on the street, in the stores, groggery or grocery, or even at the early masses at the churches, and he has the clumsy-looking instrument dangling unsheathed from his belt, or if it be an old one and half its length ground away, the chances are that the handle will be seen protruding from his boot-top. It is the distinctive mark of his occupation, and he would as soon think of being seen in public without it as the Cara of Russia would think of laying aside the imperial eagle.

The cane is cut close to the ground, the stilk stripped of its foliage and loaded at once onto the cars. The cane bears one crop each year and stands for twelve years, when it must be replanted. The elements of uncertainty in sugar-making begin at the very cutting of the cane. Good judgment must be exercised, or the cane may be cut a few days too early or too late. In either instance the percentage and quality of suzar obtained is affected.

As the cane is thrown in armfuls to the carrier which feeds it into the heavy rollers fifteen men are stationed at intervals along the sides of the carrier to distribute the cane so that it may feed into the rollers regularly. Formerly one grinding was considered sufficient, but now days in all along the sides of the carrier to distribute the cane so that it may feed into the rol-lers regularly. Formerly one grinding was considered sufficient, but nowadays in all the best mills the cane is fed through the rollers a second time or passes through a econd set.

At Soledad the cane first passes between a set of rollers weighing fifteen tons, and about 60 per cent. of the juice is squeezed out. It then passes on to a second set, and an additional 15 per cent. is extracted The two streams from the rollers unite un der the mill and pass through a strainer, one man being occupied all his time in keeping the strainer clear of refuse and obkeeping the strainer clear of refuse and obstructions. When the mills are running at full speed, and they usually are twenty-three hours out of twenty-four, seven days in the week during the grinding season, there is a stream of julce running down the sluiceway, where the conduits from the two sets of rollers unite, that is eighteen inches wide and an inch in depth. The tin cup provided for the purpose is almost always in use by some of the workmen, who cuench their thirst from the stream of dirty, whitish-looking liquid that is anything but palatable to the novice. However, it is both victuals and drink to these habituated to its use, and were it not so dirty-looking might be more attractive to the visitor.

sheltuated to its use, and were it not so dirty-looking might be more attractive to the visitor.

The cane-juice is now pumped into large tanks in the upper story of the mill, when it is treated with lime which neutralizes the acid it contains. While in the tanks or defecators, the steam is turned on and the juice, with the lime in solution, brought to a boiling point. This has the effect of coagulating the albumen. From the defecators the liquid is pumped into the first of the three great boilers, or vacuum vats, which are not, as many might suppose them to be, immense great pans, but upright boilers. In order that the boiling may take plage at as low a temperature as possible, the air in the boilers, or pans, is exhausted by steam pumps, hence the name, vacuum pans. The first boiler is heated to 200 deg., the second to 180 and the third to 150, with corresponding vacuums in each. This is known as the triple effect in boiling and produces a higher grade of sugar. The liquid is boiled to a syrup containing 50 per cent. of wacer and an equal percentage of sugar, and the moment it reaches this point of evaporation, it is run off into the "strike pans" where the delicate process of crystallization takes place. The strike pans are in charge of the most expert operatives, and as the hardening process progresses, samples are constantly being tested in the laboratory. As the sugar cools in the strike-pans it is carried to the centrifugators. One might suppose cools in the strike-pans it is carried to the centrifugators. One might suppose from the length of their name that the centrifugators were large machines. Quite the contrary; they are the smallest, but by no means the least important in the mill. They are no bigger than a bushel basket, in fact, they can best be explained by comparing them to baskets one set within another. The outer shell or basket, is stationary; the inner one is set on a spindle and revolves randidy. A basket, is stationary; the inner one is set on a spindle and revolves rapidly. A small quantity of the mixture of sugar and molasses from the strike-pans is placed in the inner shell and the spindle set in motion. It revolves at great speed and the mass of sugar and molasses spreads itself over the sides of the revolving shell.

and the mass of sugar and molasses spreads itself over the sides of the revolving shell.

Soon the sugar begins to whiten as the molasses, being the heavier, separates itself from the grains of sugar and oozes through the small holes in the sides and is thrown to the sides of the outer shell by centrifugal force. If there have been, no mishaps when the process is completed, 85 per cent. is sugar and 15 per cent. molasses. The sugar is collected from the series of centrifugators by machinery and earried to the bagging and weighing room, whence it is taken by rail and lighter to the wherves of Cienfuegos for shipment to New York.

When steam engines were first-introduced into use in the Cuban sugar works, wood was the only fuel. Experiments were tried with coal, but that proved too expensive a fuel. Then the refuse of the cane was, mixed with coal and wood. Now the refuse of the cane, after two grindings, is the only fuel used in all the larger mills of Cuba. Boilers especially adapted to the burning of bagasse, as the sugar cane refuse is termed, have been invented. At Soledad the bagasse is conveyed direct to the furnances and dumped automatically. The fires have only to be kindled at the beginning of the grinding season with sufficient wood fuel to start the grindmill, and from that on to the end of the season the mill supplies its own fuel. One is here reminded of the old problem of perpetual motion, and can but conclude that a close approach of its solution is made at Soledad. After the mill has started, the feeding of the cane into the crushing rollers supplies the force to keep all the complex machinery of the entire plantation in operation. The crushed and broken cane is carrier automatically to the furnaces, and it there supplies the power that not only does the grinding, but all pumping, boiling, etc., etc., required in claritying the cane juce and the crystal-lization into sugar.

After inspecting the mill I am invited to breakfast by Mr. Murray, who, together

It is 12 o'clock before the cook announces breakfast. The meal itself is a tasteful one, comprising the best of meats and choice Cuban fruits. Twelve o'clock seems to be a late breakfast hour for most Americans, but it is noticeable that nearly all who take up a residence in this country soon adapt themselves to its ways and peculiar customs. A cup of coffee and roll serve as an early morning meal, and as the heat of the day comes on only common laborers think of working. At 12 breakfast is served, after which the overseer of the plantation and his assistants devote their time to indoor work, not venturing out unless compelled to, till nearly 3 o'clock.

At 6 o'clock dinner is served and the evening is spent in smoking, chatting, or reading some of the many books supplied in the library, or possibly, a trip is made to some adjoining plantation.

Festivities Preliminary to the State Convention Next Week—An Interview with the Grand Commander.

Ex-Congressman D. P. Markey of Port Huron, Mich., supreme commander of the Knights of the Maccabees, arrived in the city yesterday morning, accompanied by his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Markey came on the Santa Fe and were met at Azusa by a committee of members of the order, who had left this city on an early train to meet them. The committee consisted of State Commander C. P. room was beautified with flowers and fruit and Mrs. Markey could scarcely express ber delight at the reception.

The contrast between the flowers and fruit and the zero weather she had left but three of four days before was so striking that she requested the decorations be photographed, to perpetuate the scene, which was done.

ATALK WITH THE COMMANDER. Supreme Commander Markey was kept sy during the early part of the day in ning the greetings of the local officials returning the greetings of the local officials of the order, who called upon him at the hollenbeck. He found time, however, to discourse very interestingly upon the comparatively new order of the Knights of the Maccabees to a Times representative. Mr. Markey is a gentleman of rather striking personality, and a charming conversationalist. Not only has he worked arduously for the beneat of the order of which he is supreme commander; but he has represented his district in Michigan in Congress, and through two terms of the State Legislature was Speaker in the lower house.

Throughout the United States there are 4000 subordinate lodges having on their roles a membership of 180,000 names. The order is divided into two classes, the Knights and the ladies. Of the former there are 140,000 active members, and of the latter 40,000. Since its establishment in 1881 the order has paid out $4,225,000 in round numbers in benefits to the widows and orphans of deceased members, and we claim that the beneficial features are inceptan respects superior to any that can be obtained elsewhere albelt we do not conflict with other organizations.

"As the objects of the order become understood the membership increases, and now tents are constantly being organized. Last year 1017 subordinate bodies were organized in the United States and Canada, and 61,612 members were received.

EXAMINATION OF MRS. PLATT CHARGED WITH ARSON.

The Case Grinds Along and but Little Evidence of Importance is Brought Out-Woman's Spite Work.

The preliminary hearing of the case against Mrs. Amelia Platt, who is charged with having committed arson at Pico Heights, on the night of July 27 last, was resumed before Township Justice Young yesterday, and, after again occupying his attention all'day, went over until Monday morning.

The third day's proceedings commenced with the cross-examination of the witness O. C. Knox, whose wife was orignally made a co-defendant in the case, but was discharged for lack of evidence.

As the defendant's counsel objected to the first question propounded to the witness by Assistant District Attorney Williams, the latter stated to the court that he prop

Assistant District Attorney Williams, tho latter stated to the court that he proposed to show that, prior to the fire, Knox had no property to speak of, but that after Mrs. Platt had affected her settlement with the insurance agents, the witness launched out into business at Presno.

The court held that as the witness and his wife were peculiarly situated as regarded this case, the prosecuting attorney would be permitted to go into any matter pertaining to the question at issue, however remote, which would tend to elucidate it.

The witness thereupon testified to the effect that before he left this city in January last he was a carpenter and plasterer, that he sold out his business and shop for $175 in the latter part of August, or beginning of September last. An effort was made by the prosecution to show that Mrs. Knox received some of the money paid to Mrs. Platt by the insurance company, but as that lady was no longer charged with the offense under investigation, the court sustained the objections of defendant's counsel to this line of interrogation.

tured for the occasion, but as she had told Attorney Carter about the matter before Mrs. Dunbar was on the witness stand, this was disproved. She smilngly stated that the reason she knew Mrs. Dunham was a medium, was that she had paid that woman $1$ for a private sitting, and "two-bits" for a public sitting. She admitted that she had never seen her aunt at her Pico Heights home, but that she had seen her at Mrs. Knox's residence four or five times when she called there.

The circular recently sent out by the Underwriters' Association has been responded to by the general agents, and in every case there has been a hearty acquiesence with their plans and a promise of co-operation. It is not yet definitely ascertained whether there will be a lowering of the rates for business properly centrally located, but the indications are that there will be such a result of the combined action of the agents of the various companies and that the practices to which the circular called attention, the writing of policies for Pasadena without credit given to the local agents, will be discontinued.

A SAN DIEGO MAN CAUGHT IN SANTA ANA.

Charged with Attempting to Jump His Bond—The Woods Full of Candidates—A New Kind of Orange.

SANTA ANA, March 16.—(Special Correspondence.) J. W. Roscoe, who has the notoriety of having conducted a very questionable resort in San Diego for several months, until the better element of that city made it so warm for him that he was obliged to shut up shop, was arrested in this city Friday evening by Sheriff Nichols on a telegram from the Catef of Police of the Bay'nclimate.city informing him to be on the lookout for Koscoe, who would probably be with his wife on the northern train that would arrive here at $i.20 p.m., and that he was wanted for jumping his bond.

Sheriff Nichols was on and when the train rolled in, and sure chough his man was on board. He was immediately placed under arrest, and after a hurried consultation with his wife, who proceeded on the train to isakersited, he left in charge of the Sheriff. Today Roscoe sent for the Times correspondent to whom he stated that he was not jumping his bond; that he was only going to Los Angeles on some business matters, and that his wife was going to Bakersfield on a visit to some of her friends. He stated that he had conculted with his attorney before leaving in reference to his bond, and that he was told by him that it would be all right for him to go and that if he was wanted he would telegraph him. He stated that he was very much surprised when the Sheriff here told him that he was under arrest for jumping his bond.

The case nuw pending, for which he is under bond to appear, he claims, is the outgrowth of a political contest which is now waging in the Bay'nclimate city. Constable Marks of San Diego arrived on the evening train and departed at 5:30 p.m. for the south with his prisoner.

A NEW VARIETY OF ORANGES.

A NEW VARIETY OF ORANGES.

Dr. M. S. Jones of Tustin has a new variety of orange of his own propagation which he has named "Jones's California beauty." The parent tree was from an old seed bed in Los Angèles, and was purchased, together with a quantity of other trees, by the doctor about twenty years ago. The tree being of peculiar appearance and its foliage being some different from the others, the doctor began budding from it, and from that time on until a few, years ago has been experimenting in crossing this variety with others until how has a very smooth, thin-skinned, sweet and juicy fruit that will hang on the tree until August without getting puffy or woody. It is a regular bearer, thornless, almost seedless, and grows like a limber-twig apple. It is of a superior flavor, and at the present time is attracting "considerable attention among the orchardists of Orange county.

The fruit and the bearing tree can be seen at the doctor's ranch, two and one-half miles northeast of Santa Ana.

Pierce of San Diego has a case on trial, being the suit of the State Loan and Trust Company against Lowell Rogers, et al., for the fore-closure of a mortgage for $$800, payment of part of which is disputed. Judge Otis of Department One is hearing the case of Eugene Robinson of Chino, charged with criminal assault, upon Leona Jones, a fourteen-year-old girl, and the courtroom is crowded to hear the salicious testimony that comes from the witnesses, and the lawyers avoid all appearance of squeamishness and call things by their right names. Among the lawyers for the defense is W. A. Harris of Los Angeles. In Judge Campbell's department is a case of malpractice against a couple of Redlands doctors, in which damages of $2335 are claimed. Among the lawyers for plaintiff is H. M. Willis, Jr., of Pheenix, Ariz., who came to assist the prosecution. Barhes, the Ontario bank-robber, was brought in for arraignment, but the court was too busy to attend to him and his case was set for Monday at 2 p.m.

Many moons ago a large number of valuable horses were stolen here, and no trace could be found until today. Among them was a mule, and his inability to travel as fast as the thieves wished caused him to be beaten with many stripes and finally turned loose in West Riverside, the robbers having evidently made for the Santa Ana Pass to escape to Los Angeles with their booty. The mule was left near the ranch of Dr. Patten; taken in and cared for by him and though he made inquiries found no trace of the owner until news reached Marshal Ralphs, and the owner of the mule was sent down to identify his property. This is a very coldinal toward finding the horses, but it may have to some developments.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY.

An Important Water Deal—Rumored Election Scheme.

SAN DIEGO, March 16. — (Special Correspondence.) It is believed that the directors of the Linda Vista Irrigation District will begin negotiations with the Mountain Stream Water Company next week for the irrigation of the 43,000 acres in that district. The proposed plan includes the acquirement of the Pamor reservoir site by the water company; also certain water rights. The water company is to furnish 2000 inches of water for 300 an inch, with an annual rental of 225 an inch; 700 inches to be delivered in June, 1896; 700 inches a year later, and the full 2000 inches in 1898; the company reserving the right to sell 1000 inches from the reservoir to the city of San Diego. The Mountain Stream Company is regarded as a part of the Consolidated Water Company, which is now furnishing this city with water, it it carries out this plan of furnishing water for the Linda Vista district, it is believed that the local water question will be settled for some time to come. The prejudice against the Mt. Tecarte Water Company has been increased because of the indiscreet action of the promoters of that enterprise in disseminating vituperative and untruthful reports concerning the water supply of this city and county. Replying to questions propounded in the Chamber of Deputies today, Senor Alejandro Groissard, Minister of State, said that the report of Minister Taylor, acting on behalf of the United States government, claiming that reparation from Spain was due the United States on account of the Allianca incident was true.

The United States government, he said, at the same time demanded that American trade with Cuba should not be interfered with. He hoped the Allianca affair would be amicably settled. The United States government, he explained, considered the firing on the Allianca to be a violation of the principles of international law.

Minister Groissard, in conclusion, said the Spanish government had ordered the fullest investigation of the affair to be made. The government, he added, was willing to agree to any settlement, provided the principles of international law were not infringed upon, and that no attempt was made to prejudice the dignity of the nation.

Senor Dia Moreau, formerly an officer in the Spanish navy, said the commander of the gunboat had the right to demand that the Allianca show her fias. He argued that the Spanish officers also make any currier statement or to attempt any explanation of the incident until complete details and he reports of the Spanish officers of the gunboat, who had, it is claimed, fired on the Allianca, had been received.

CASTORIA

Casteria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Oplum, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oll. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd. cures Diarrhea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves tecthing troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea-the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for chil-dren. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Oscoon

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria in-stead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves." m to premature graves Dr. J. THIS IS THE KIND OF WOMAN WE BELIEVE IN.

Considerable criticism has been indulged in regarding the attitude of The Times and its artist toward women. The "advanced" woman seems to think that we are opposed to women on general principles, and that The Times takes pleasure in opposing every effort on their part toward a higher development. It is only fair and just that our artist should have an opportunity of defining his position on this most important question. True womanhood in all its phases has no more ardent champion than The Times and its artist.

CONQUERING THE SIERRA.

THE UNIQUE ACHIEVEMENT OF RIDING HIGH ON THE IRON HORSE_A MAN OF NERVE,

Who Smote the Rocky Mount and Streams of Pleasure and Information at Once Gushed Forth-The Beautiful Scenic Wonders of Echo Mountain and Mount Lowe.

Ruskin has said that the difficulty with a large majority of people is that "they go through life without looking up." The great world of beasty that is above and around them they never see. The springing blade of graas, wonderful in its outline and perfect symmetry; the leaf-crowned shrub and opening flower, the thousand-leaved trees with their boughs pulsing in the light air, and catching the golden glory of the sunbeams; the majosty of towering mountain heights, and the marvelous color cloud and sky are all to them as if they were not, for their eyes take no note of them, and their souls give them no recognition.

The universality of this blindness we do not fully realize except by the aid of comparison, when we look at the few who see and the multitude who are blind to nature's charms. There are numbers right here in our midst who would talk with enthusiasm of a trip to Europe, who yet never have informed themselves of the equal natural wonders lying at their very doors, and who have many a word in praise of the eigant hostelries to be found elsewhere, when above the clouds, in the arms of our mether mountains, all the comforts, conveniences and elegancies of world-famed resorts may be found in the new house, with sall modern appointments, upon the lofty summit of Echo Mountain. Three housand five hundred feet aboys ealevel it fronts the skies, with higher peaks behind it piercing the blue, while upon either hand are vast mountain flanks stretching to the valley, clothed with chaparral and skirted with forests, with silver frings of leaping waterfalls gleaming amid the green. One would dream that in these guarded canyons had long as been fought the battle of the Titans. Huge bowlders are scattered everywhere along the mountain's base, and in the beds of streams, and nestling among them are along the mountain's base, and in the beds of streams, and nestling among them are along the mountain's base, and in the beds of streams, and nestling among the mountain's base, and in the beds of streams, and nestling am along the mountain's base, and in the beds of streams, and nestling among them are delicate ferns and numberless wildflowers. There, too, are brilliant patches of the wild illac, the ceanothus and the mountain laurel; and there vast, golden, radiant floods of California poppies—the copa de oro of the Spaniards—which set the hills afiame with their yellow splendor. Every day, at each meal at the Echo Mountain Kotel, these brilliant flowers brighten the long tables of the spactous dining-hail, their golden disks gleaming brilliantly above the snowy napery and lustrous glass and silver.

It is said that these wonderful poppy beds upon these mesas have been clearly seen sixty milee out at sea, gorgeous in their rich coloring, reflecting the gold of the sunshine in which they are steeped. Strangers coming to this section marvel at the slowness of appreciation—which to them seems too much like indifference—which characterizes so many of our people in regard to the gigantic enterprise—the Mt. Lowe Railway—which is linking the valley's bed with the loftiest mountain beights above it, and which enables visitors to gilde skyward in "white chariots," 3500 feet, almost noiselessly upward, and still upward, while the mighty hills sink below us and the nearer summits dwindle at our feet. Drawn by the unseen cable we mount skyward, leaving the every-day world this vast distance below us. As we go up we feel as if gilding upon the rim of the world. On either hand of our car, while borne upward as by the wind, we see at times vast mountain gorges whose floors lie thousands of feet below us, where grow giant oaks and other trees, with a wilderness of chaparral. The mountains which like blossoms, rich in its profusion of flowering chaparral, and sentineled by giant forest trees.

The beauty of this canyon must be seen to be appreciated, filled as it is with a "dim religious light," and with grander harmonies than all the Old World cathedrals, dropped from the lips of its many waterfalls.

It is here, under the shadow of the cternal hills, whose rocky walls rise hundreds of feet above us, that we take the "Cable Incline" for the summit of Echo Mountain. As we step into the "white chariot" we look up and tremble. So nearly perpendicular seems the steep before us and so far-reaching the sky seems to rest upon its shoulders, but so quickly do we ascend we are soon landed upon-the flower-bordered plateau where the new Echo Mountain House stands, surrounded by broad verandas where its guests may sit and view the wide, wide world below them.

And here let me tell our readers of the wonderful picture which I saw but a few days since from this same vantage ground. The world below us had for hours been buried in fog, resembling a vast, billowless ocean. But at length the fog lifted and the valley lay three thousand feet below us in the luminous sunshine. Above and around us hung the mighty curtain of fog. It fell in massive folds before us, caught up here and there by some light winds' breath, and underneath its arch gleamed upon their crests, the blue of an unclouded heaven arching over all. The world of cloud and darkness is all below us. The birds dart from tree to tree in these upper heights; the brown-limbed chaparral shows dewy diamonds among its leaves; the wild iliac glows with its rich purple, and the mountain laurel is beautiful in its blossoming fairness. Many a flower-cup is filled with distilled vapor, sparkling in the sunlight. The silver-footed falls leap downward from the craggy heights, joyous in the sun's new shining. The new modern hotel upon Echo Mountain is elegantly furnished throughout, and under its present management is delightfully homelike and attractive. The main entrance hall is a spacious room that will accommodate scores of guests, and here, about the great open fireplace they gather of evenings for pleasant social intercourse. A band provides charming music, songs, recitations and pleasant readings are in order, and in the intervals between there is free and agreeable intercourse. Stilted formality is relegated to the background, and do you see a pleasant-faced guest whom you thinky ou would like to know, waiting for no formal introduction, you drift toward him, and soon a chatty intercourse is established. The host and his charming wife do their utmost to establish the home feeling which prolongs one's stay at this house above the clouds. In the dining-room the service is good, and at all hours and everywhere throughout this sumptious hostelry every needed comfort is supplied. There are about thirty miles of excellent bridle roads on the mountain, withing outdoor excursions, but when the extension to the railroad is completed, as it soon will be, these will be used only by the nature-lovers whose feet do not tire, and by those who prefer the exercise of the saddle to the swiftly-moving car which will then carry its passengers to the lofty summit of Mount Lowe, the very high-priest of the mountains.

And nowhere in the wide world will there be found another road so full of senic world will there be f towns and cities, wide-sweeping plains, the lower bills, like huge index-fingers pointing to the far-off shining diamond of the sea. The long, sloping fanks of the mountains were draped in whiteness. Slowly, slowly rose the misty curtain, and the great world-plains, sun-touched and glowing, breadened before us; the earth that had been in fos-eclipse was more fully revealed. The billowy fog-clouds, massed at length like a moving battallon, charged upon the mountains. Standing on, the broad verands, of the mountain house, they sweet by us, a ghostly army without breath or sound. They rushed against the mountain fanks and captured them, sweeping them from our sight. Without pick or spade, or crash of cannon the giant mountain peaks were buried from our sight. The clouds wept tears, but the valley smiled. The golden poppies lifted their heads far down the slopes and nodded lightly, for they had received a blessed baptism as the vapory mass rolled by them, leaving them in the sunshine. The valleys below us seemed newly born, glowing in color and rich in opalescent lights. The low hills were kneeling in brightness, their faces uplifted to the shrouded mountains. Not a sound reached us from below, but a great blackwinged bird rose upward, then bore slowly, down upon the heights, his massive wings outspread in soundiess motion, as if he were the phantom of some dead thing seeking his sepulchre. Soon upon the crest of the mountains he was wrapped in his mist, shroud and he was lost to our sight.

But again the panorama changes. The fog drops downward in a misty avalanche. Once more the world below us is hidden, and we stand on the mounts of resurrection. The mountains live again, standing forth girdled with sunbeams, their peaks warm and glowing, the uporning sitting upon their crests, the biue of an unclouded heaven arching over all. The world of a cloud and darkness is all below us. The birds dart from tree to tree in these upper heights; the brown-limbed chaparral shows dewy diamonds among its leaves; and the raced f THE MANNISH WOMAN.

tain House, and here, too, another observatory will be erected for the accommodation of the large 37½-Inch telescope. This observatory will be 2000 feet higher than the Lick Observatory upon Mt. Hamiton, and in the clear atmosphere of Mt. Lowe it will surely reveal new astronomical wonders. The present observatory is located about a quarter of a mile above Echo Mountain House, and it shelters the

its wide fields of light when the eclipse had passed.

The great searchlight, the wonder of the Columbian Exposition, is another attraction of this resort, and is placed just a brief distance below the hotel, and of its effects the visitor never tires when its rays are sent out searching the vast space about it and resembling the tail of a mighty comet.

are sent out searching the vast space about it and resembling the tail of a mighty comet.

The menagerie of native wild animals is another attraction, where may be found the bear of our mountains, the civet cat, moles, squirrels, raccoons, coyotes and other interesting inhabitants of the upper wilds.

Weeks might be passed at this mountain resort with something new to delight the visitor every day, and when the Crystal Springs Hotel and cottages are completed, with the hotel upon the higher peak, there will be along the Mt. Lowe line of railway three comfortable and inviting hotels—the Echo Mountain House, 2500 feet, and the Mt. Lowe Hotel, 6000 feet above sea level: Crystal Springs, 5006 feet, and the Mt. Lowe Hotel, 6000 feet above our lower world.

It is a gigantic achievement, the building of this line of railway over the very mountain heights, subduing such elevations, and planting along the line of road these princely hostelries, provided with every creature comfort, and Southern Cainfornia may well be proud of the man whose brain conceived this mighty undertaking and carried it on toward successful completion. The Old World can offer nothing better, nor could the traveler ask a grander resort-than is found in this conquered world above the clouds.

(Portland Oregonian:) It undoubtedly is true that the government was held up by the great foreign bankers in the late bond sale as a poor widow is held up by a pawnbroker when she is obliged to raise money on her furniture. But it is irrational to rail at the banker. It is the trade of the money-lender to bleed persons in need, whether he does business in a great international bank or a petty pawnshop. They who fall into hands of money-lenders should blame only their own imprudence.

A TALK WITH EMERSON.

HOW HE APPEARED IN THE MIDST OF HIS WORK.

Edmund Kirke Recalls a Day Spent with Emerson—Forcytes Will-son's High Opinion of

BY JAMES P. GILMORE,

[Specially Contributed]

One morning in the summer of 1865, Forcythe Willson came to me at my house, the "old Coolidge place," Cambridge, Mass., saying, "I ought to go out to see Emerson; but I want you to go with me. A half hour alone with him would de-prive me of the power of speech. When can you go?"

It was about 10 o'clock on that morning when, opening a low gateway and passing through a prim, checker-board garden, we stood before the old oaken doorway of Mr. Emerson's residence in the very heart of Concord. The house was of dingy white with green blinds—one of those unsightly, packing-box structures that are so common throughout rural New En-gland; and if one's dwelling is an index to one's character, this house indicated that the "poet philosopher" was much more of a philosopher than of a poet. Our summons was answered by a prim-look-ing woman who seemed a queer compound of steel springs, Oswego starch and the neatest of Yankee calico. She ushered us into a broad, roomy hall, and left us standing there while she went away to

EMERSON IN HIS DEN. EMERSON IN HIS DEN.

It was a low-studded apartment, about twenty feet square, with the same ugly paper on the the walls; but this was now partly hidden by nunmerous portraits and engravings. In the center of the room was a round table on which were some books and pamphlets, an ordinary inkstand and a few quires of packet-post paper. Wear the table was a solid arm chair, and scattered about on the floor—under the chair and the table—were about twenty sheets of freshly-written manuscript. Evidently he was at work and we should be an interruption to him. I was about to say so when he motioned us to a couple of chairs and, seating himself, said again: "I am glad you have come. My ideas flow slowly this morning, and a little talk will brush me up."

"Then," I said, "you do not always write with the same facility?"

"Oh, no! I am very muth subject to moods. Often a month- passes when I don't put a thought upon paper."

"Well, you have a curious way of keeping your manuscript."

"Yes," he answered, "on the floor. When I finish a page I am apt to brush it aside to be rid of it; but I gather the sheets up before I leave the room, and I may as well do that now, for I shall work no more today."

With this he stooped down and gathered together the sheets that were on his side of the table, while I aided him by picking up the few that were out of his reach, saying as I did so: "I've often wondered at your clear, beautiful handwriting. An expert would be puzzled to detect in your regular, business-like chirography anything of a poet or a philosopher."

He smiled, saying: "Well, the first essential in headwriting is legibility." It was a low-studded apartment, about proof sheets: that he once set up a book of yours where his bill for the plates was only about $400, while for the proof alterations it was more than $1300."

Mr. Emerson smiled again, and said: "Oh, yes! That was my second volume of essays. I worked hard over that book, and it never did exactly suit ms. I suppose I am very hard upon proof sheets, for I think no one should give any but his most mature thought to the public But, tell me, have you not come prepared to give me the day?"

"We would not interfere with your work," said Willson, "but neither of us has anything pressing to call him home."

"Then would you prefer a walk around Walden pond, or a chat with me till dinner time, and then the afternoon with Hawthorne and Alcott. Wendeil Holmes has sent Hawthorne one of your poems:

has sent Hawthorne one of your poems: he is delighted with it and would enjoy meeting you."

Willson, "but only one Emerson." A day standing there while she went away to announce our arrival. Then I noticed that the hall was lined with a dingy paper; that in it stood an old-fashioned hat stand, garnished with a broad-brimded beaver, and that a wide, half-naked stairway was beyond, leading to the second story. But soon a door into the front hall opened and we were face to face with the great oracular philosopher. A smile was on his lips, a pen behind his ear, and two or three great blotches of ink were on as many of his fingers; but he held out both his hands to us, saying. "Come in, come right into my den. I am glad to see you."

"Yes, and he was a wonderful old man. I remember the advice he once gave to a young clergyman who had applied to ham for instruction about writing his sermons: 'Have something to say, and then say it.' What did he say about 'Nature?"

To an' recall it all, but I distinctly remember that he quoted against you what the priest tells me, only in different words. For all that thou hast no Christianity."

"I suppose," answered Emerson, "that Dr. Emmons never reflected that the most effectual way to preach Christ is to say nothing about Him. Is there not enough of scriptural already in the world without my adding to it?"

MERSON'S CHARM IN CONVERSA-

Then the talk drifted into other chanels, and Emerson poured forth a mingled ream of poetry, preverb and transcenentalism. He was the most carnest of ilkers, and we forgot his wide renown a writer in listening to the charm of its conversation. He seemed to take in he peculiar tastes and prejudices of each f us by a sort of intuition, and we perelved our own thoughts more clearly then they came back to us reflected rom his translucent intellect.

After dinner we spent a couple of bours with him and Hawthorne, and then, after a brief call upon Alcott, we took the rain back to Boston. I would like to elate the interview at Hawthorne's, but berhaps I can better fill my remaining pace with the views that Willson expressed as we rode toward home as to he character and influence of Emerson.

NO PORTRAIT GIVES A COMPLETE IDEA OF EMERSON.

"Then let us get out of this den," said Emerson, rising and leading the way into a rear apartment." I have not attempted to sketch his personal appearance, for I suppose every reader has seen one or more of his portraits. I have myself seen at least twenty, no two of them alike, yet every one resembling him in some particulars. However, none give any complete idea of the man—of the sorene benignity of his face, the unstudied majesty of his manner, and a certain unconscious power that seemed to envelop him, and to lift him far above ordinary humanity. He was nearer my ideal of the Christ, as He must have appeared when He lived among men, than any other man I ever encountered.

The room into which he ushered us was of the same size as the others, but it looked out upon green fields and was odorous with out upon green fields and was odorous with a second of the early store of the same size as the others, but it looked out upon green fields and was odorous with a politosophy are in the air; men cannot ris orimant points since in the sen-tences of his severest critics. The new man brings new ideas. Emerson had to create his audience; but while he was doing so men became gradually aware that his thoughts had value, and they accepted them, not because they were new, but because they felt there was a great ethical power behind them. The world has now recognized the seer, and so his words will go down the centuries.

The manufacture of false tails for horses has reached so high a degree of perfection that the counterfeit may be buckled onto the stump of a docked horse and will travel along beside a mate with a natural long tail, defying detection.

Li Hung Chang and His Yellow Jacket-His Three-eyed Peacock Feather and His Birthday Presents-The Emperor and His Tartar Relatives-Chinese Buttons-The Dragon Gowns.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Li Hung Chang has been given back his yellow jacket and his three-eyed peacock feather. The Emperor has called him to Peking, and he should by this time be on his way to Japan to aid in the settlement of the war. His career shows the ups and downs of Chinese officials, and a look at it will give some idea of the queer ranks and orders of nobility with which the empire of China is honeycombed. Li Hung Chang has been getting all sorts of presents from the Emperor as go, and all the officials gave him presents. He had carticads of silk, a ton or so of gilt scrolls and jewelry and other stuff in order to pay for La's education. Li passed the examination of his own province and those of the district in which he was located, and when he was still in his teens he went to Peking and wrote his essays in the big examination halls there. Seventeen thousand other students of all ages, from 18 to 80, were being examined at the same time, and Li came out the highest. This gave him his start, and he was put on the staff of one of the generals who were acting against the rebels in the famous Taiping rebellion. This war oc-

THE NOBILITY OF CHINA. Pierce was President. It cost the country 10,000,000 of lives, and it was largely through Li that ft was put down. Li Hung Chang is a diplomat, as well as a statesman, and he worked his way up from one position to another until he got to be commander-in-chief. He took Chinesee Gordon into his confidence and made him one of his generals. Gordon drilled the Chinese according to foreign tactics, and together they vanquished the rebels. The result was that Li became the greatest man in China. He was given one big office acter another until he became only second to the emperor. This is the position which he holds today. He is superindent of northern trade, and controls the commercial matters of all North China, humbering more than 170,000,000 of people. He is the governor-general of the province of Chili, and is practically the Secretary of State. He has for years been the Chinese and foreign nations, and his the most progressive Chinaman in the impire. R was he who introduced the telegraph duto China, and the wires that run into his palace at Tien-Tsin connect him with every court of Europe and with avery part of the United States. He is said to be a very rich man, and his income rangee between $50,000 and $100,000 per year. No one knows how much he has made outside of his offices. I heard it said to be a very rich man, and his friends claim that he is not worth more than $2,000,000 or $3,000,000. Whatever he has must come from his own idea of his share of the receipts, for the Chinese government pays small salaries and expects the officials to steal the balance.

The country is divided up apiece for them. These highest princes are the brothers or sons of the Emperor. when he was alive he was a man of considerable influence. The Empress Downager has more power than any other person in the country. She educated the Emperor and she winds him about her finger. He has not yet been able to cut loose from her apron-strings, and she governs him also through his wives. She placked out the women who compose his imperial harlem, and she has the whole court under her long-nailed thumb. She is a strong friend of Li Hung Chang's, in the chair strength of the palex, and it is through her influence that Li is sent to Japan. She also governs the cunchs of the palace, of whom there are supposed to be three thousand, and she

HOW THE NOBLES DRESS. Every one has heard of the Chinese buttons and how they indicate rank. A great many people, however, have no idea what the official button is. All Chinamen have buttons about as big as a hickory nut on the tops of their skull caps, and in the case of the common people these buttons are made out of blue or red silk thread, and when a man goes into mourning they are white silk. The average common cap is of the finest black satin, and it surprised me to find that the shapes of these caps change from year to year, and that last year's block is not the proper shape for this year. The Chinese are as particular about the out of their clothes as we are. They have their favorite fashionable colors, and there are just as many dudes and dandies in Peking and Canton as there are in New York and Washington. The official button is about three times as large as the ordinary silk button. It is about as big as the largest buckeye and its color and material indicates the rank of the wearer. It stands straight up on the crown of the cap and it sometimes fastens on the peacock feather. The highest button is of dark red coral. Members of the second class of nobility wear a coral ball of light red. The third class have, a button of light blue, and the fourth of dark blue. A noble or official of the fifth class wears a ball of crystal, and a mandarin of the sixth class has a little round ball made of mother-of-pearl on the top of his cap. Below these come the mandarins of the seventh and cighth classes, who wear big marbles of gold, and members of the ninth class, who have their hats decorated with silver balks.

These official caps or hats fit close to the head, and have brims which are turned up all around, and extend as high up as the top of the cap. The caps are of black beaver, and they are usually covered with a red silk tassel, which begins at the button and runs out to the edges of the top. The laws provide as to the kind of a hat an official must wear. Every one has heard of the Chinese buttons and how they indicate rank. A great and his dress is regulated by the stat-utes. The sleeves of all officials must be very long and come down over the hands, and whenever the nobles and officials call on the Emperor they must not have uneit sleeves rolled up. The idea is that no man can fight well with his arms enveloped in bags, and a would-be assassin, when he is compelled to come in upon his knees and have his sleeves extending for a foot beyond his hands, would require some time to prepare for action.

DRAGON GOWNS.

The laws provide that certain colors shall not be worn by common people, and only the highest nobles and the Emperor can wear dresses embroidered with three dragons. A great many of the officials have their gowns embroidered with dragons, and you can tell the rank of a man by the number of gold dragons he has on his gown, but these dragons must be four-clawed dragons and not five. The laws regulate the length of the gowns. They state how the sleeves must be cut and the number of buttons that an official must use on his underclothes. Their cuffs must be cut in the shape of a horse's hoof, and the man who understands the Chinese can tell just how high an official is and what he is by his clothes. Every high noble, and many of the officials at well, wears a square of embroidery on his breast and his back. This is made of gold or silver thread, and a stork embroidered on a man's breast shows that he is of the first rank, while if the bird be a pheasant, its wearer must be of the second rank. For the other ranks there are peacocks, wild geese and quail. Each of these squares is about the size of a lady's pocket handkerchief, and the work is beautifully done. The military officers have their breasts embroidered the same way, but they use beasts instead of birds, and lions, tiger's and dragons take the places of the quails and the storks.

The feather stuck out behind the hat addinglyered as Li Hung Chang put the Lings and bowed low in saluting his guests. There were other peacock feather upon some of the Chinese high officials among the guests, but Li Hung Chang was the only one who had a three-eyed peacock feather. The double-eyed peacock feather is a much lower than this is what is known as the blue plume or the crow feather. This is conferred as a reward for services upon officials below the sixth degree of rank, and it was the bulue plume or the crow feather. She was taken up by the Emperon and made his favorite concubine, and in due time became mother of the succeeding Emperor.

SOME QUEER PRINCES.

Some of the members of the Emperor's family are very poor. I was told of a number of princes who delight in going about the ends of the poles perfectly plain. The winter dress of these officials is different from their summer dress, and one of the Tautois of the Hunan province whom I saw, had on an official boots were of black broadcloth, with soles of white wood fully two inches thick. I met a Chinese noble at Nanking and took a photograph of him. He had on a black fur cap, with a peacock feather sticking out of its back. His blue silk jacket was fastened with buttons of gold, and his long gown was of light yellow satin. He took me through his establishment, which was made up of a number of houses surrounding courts.

In one of these courts the family furs were hung out for airing, and there were hundreds of fur-lined garments of all kinds, some of which must have been worth several hundred dollars apiece. One of these big officials always has a lot of lackeys about him, and there is a world of pomp connected with each one of them. In every town there are government offices which are known as Yamens, and the government clerks and subordinates are called Yamen-runners. The number of these office-holders are legion, and the office-seekers are found everywhere by the thousands. Foo-Chow contains half a million people, and I have heard it estimated that it had 25,000 men who held office, though a large number of them were probably connected with the government of the province in which Foo-Chow is located. Supposing each of these men to have five hangers-on, or to have a family of five, this would make a total of 125,000 people to be supported in some way by offices.

affections and tender solicitudes of the powerful man whom the world associated with blood and iron. We know from letters published, how frequently the latter wrote to his wife, how during he enforced and often prolonged absences, he yearned for her and the children's presence, and how, before the great political era of his life set in, he wished for nothing better than to live with his family the quiet life of a simple nobleman on the estates inherited from a long line of ancestors. It was during one of these absences that illness befell him. When his condition became, alarming, he sent for his wife, who came, ordered aft the medicine bottles to be thrown out of the window, and established herself at his bedside. She was herself an adept in medical knowledge, and under her supervision and nursing her husband soon raffied. Her experience as a medical adviser was gained during her life spent in the country, where the peasantry and the poor living on the patternal estate, and later at Schoenhausen, her husband's family seat, depended on her entirely in the absence of a physician.

THE BISMARCK FAMILY.

No one who ever came in contact with the wife of Prince Bismarck can possibly forget her—her graceful and simple manner, her winning affability. Tall, slender, with pliable figure, regular festures—not handsome, but attractive—dark eyes and hair, she was a woman to whom you felt drawn in sympathy at once. It was but matural that she should be the partner and helpmate of the great statesman, who, while he guided with an iron hand the destinies of his country, craved the tender and leving ministrations of wife and mother.

and loving ministrations of wife and mother.

The Princess was brought up at a distance from the capital, on one of those old and large Pommeranian estates, the owner of which is still somewhat of a patriarch—morally, if not in fact—to his temants and subordinates. Johanna von Puttkammer was an only daughter, and educated and bred in accordance with the old and proud traditions, and strictly plous principles of the family. At the age of 23 she met Baron Otto von Bismarck at the country residence of mutual friends, and soon afterward the time came when—as Bismarck wrote to her in after years—Johanna Puttkammer reduced to order Bismarck's hitherto wild bachelor ways. Her gentile and loving disposition, coupled with energy of character and sprightliness, proved to be the welcome chain with which she bound to herself unto death the

the song humming in my ears all day long:

Home was to Bismarck the port in which he rested after having faced the storms of political and diplomatic life. From St. Petersburg, whither he had been sent as Ambassador in 1859, he writes to his wife: "If the Lord permits, I will be with you in a week from now, and hope to find you and the little folks well and ready for the journey hither. I long for the moment when for the first time we will sit around the tea table in our winter quarters. I shan't care then, how thick may be the ice on the Neva."

BISMARCK'S ADMIRATION FOR HIS WIFE. Bismarck was fully aware of the treasure he possessed in this woman for a wife. In one of his letters to her he called wife. In one of his letters to her he called her the sunshine of his life. When separated from her he wrote often, confiding to her his enjoyments as well as his 20-litical cares. In return for all she gave him he wished that she also should have her share of pleasure. In 1862 he was removed from the Embassy of St. Petersburg to that of Paris, with the possibility of being recalled at a moment's notice, to be made Prussian Cabinet Minister. At that time he wrote to his wife: "In any case I desire that you should come on, even if it were but for a short time, so that you might know Paris." A little later he writes to his sister, Mme. von Arnim: "I am somewhat troubled lest Johanna will not like it here" (in Paris.) At the approach of the different anniversaries he used to enlist the services of his sister to buy presents for his wife. At one time it was a bracelet he wished her to have, of pure gold, broad, jointed like a coat of mail, pliable, "as heavy as you can get if for shout 200 thalers ($150.) For Christmas at St. Petersburg, he asked his sister at Berlin to get for Johanna from twelve to twenty large pear's to be added to her own string, for which he means to spend about 300 thalers.

Visiting at her' father's estate, or when at home at her husband's country residence, she went among the meighboring peasantry, guessing their needs, ministering to their wants, and gaining their confidences by talking to them in their own patois. At Berlin, St. Petersburg and elsewhere she moved in aristocratic society and at court with the ease and grace which was hers by birth and education, but without a particle of personal pride or hauteur. At St. Petersburg she frequently represented her husband at routs and balls, because his health needed rest at night. The latter wrote to his sister at that time: "We can't make our appearance before 11. Most people come after midnight, and go to a second soiree with a supper after 2 o'clock. My health will not yet submit to that. . Johanna goes often and replies indefatigably to all inquiries after my health."

THE WELFARE AND HAPPINESS OF HER FAMILY HER FIRST CONCERN.

HER FAMILY HER FIRST CONCERN. HER FAMILY HER FIRST CONCERN.
The truly German woman—the very type of one—had nothing more at heart than the welfare and happiness of her husband and her children. The home was her world, the hearthstone her altar, and she the priestess who officiated. At Berlin the domicile of Bismarck was in the Wilhelmstrasse, near Unter den Linden, where he resided from 1862, when made chief of the Ministry, to the end of his political career, in 1889. It is an old-fashioned building, only two stories high, with two side wings toward the street, and a high iron railing and gate, separating the large courtyard from the former. Here it was that the meeting of the Berlin Congress of 1878 took place.

Count Bismarck while at Vermilles was asked by Prince Albrecht of Prussis how the Countess was. Nearing her seventieth year, the health of the Princess began to fall, and not long afterward the end came at the castle of Vargin, in the neighborhood of her old Pommeranian home, on November 27, 1894. AT A DINNER GIVEN BY THE BISMARCKS TO GEN. AND MRS. GRANT.

The writer was fortunate enough to be present at the dinner Prince and Princess Bismarck gave to Gen. and Mrs. Grant, in July of that year. After dinner the Prince led the way to show his renowned guests the memorable hall, with its large table, where the meetings of the high and mighty representatives of the nations took place. The court was in mourning for some distant potentate, and the ladies were all in black. The Princess, sitting opposite to the writer, chatted gaily during the dinner, and afterwards, when we all sat around in the large salon sipping our coffee, she moved about among her guests to see that all received duatention and were made comfortable, while the Prince and Gen. Grant sat side by side next to the sofa where Mrs. Grant was seated, the former smoking his long pipe and the latter his cigar. When we all took leave our hosts accompanied us to the head of the stairs and the Princess, in her most amiable and simple manner, helped Mrs. Grant to her cloak and then took my own wrap from a servant and put it shound my shoulders before I could pre-Pacific Loan Company Leads in a New Line of Business.

The immortal bard and the American playwright, George H. Boker, will be fully represented at the Los Angeles Theater this week, when Frederick Warde and Louis James play their last engagement together in this city, appearing in "Henry IV," "Francesca da Rimini," "Julius Caesar," "Othello" and "Richard III." Both of these artists are famous in their respective lines and are scholarly gentlemen, with wide popularity in California, as is evinced by the great business they do every season.

It is fondly hoped that the age of horse-play, vulgar farce-comedy and sen-horse-play, vulgar farce-comedy and sen-sectional melodrama, in which steam en-gines or pile-drivers play leading roles, is about past, and that the master drama-tist of all the ages, William Shakespeare, as once again to occupy his rightful place in the minds and hearts of the American night are using skill and in-ent effort. The feature of this week's engagement will be the presentation of "Henry IV," which has not been done in this country sefore this season for many years. It is a play full of historic interest and detail, and in comedy and tragedy is about equally divided. The poetry is superior in style and sentiment to nearly all of Shakespeare's other dramatic writings, and yet the action is full of life and freedom, and is not at all hampered by it. The principal roles of Prince Hall and Falstaff are interpreted by Messrs. Warde and James, respectively, and Edythe Chapman has a clever bit in Lady Percy, but does not figure long in the play. The press throughout the country has spoken in the highest terms of the play's scenic adornment and costuming.

JAMES AS "OTHELLO."

"Francesca da Rimini," George H. Bo-ker's splendid tragedy, is announced for Tuesday, in which Mr. Warde will appear Tuesday, in which Mr. Warde will appear as the hunchback Lanciotto, Mr. James as Pepe the jester, Guy Lindsay as Paolo and Miss Chapman as Francesca. "Julius Caesar" will be given on Wednesday evening, Mr. Warde making his first appearance here as Cassius. Mr. James will repeat his familiar and powerful interpretation of Brutus, Guy Lindsay will be seen as Marc Antony, Miss Chapman as Calphurina and Florence Everett as Portia. "Otherlo" is the bill for Friday, with Mr. James in the title role, Mr. Warde as lago and Miss Chapman as Desdemona. The engagement closes on Saturday evening with a great production of "Richard III," Mr. Warde appearing as Richard, the hunchback king, Mr. James as Richard, the hunchback king, Mr. James as Richard, the advance sale of seats has been very large and a great success seems assured.

pear in scenes and selections from grand and ight opers. Delaur is the possessor of a rich baritone voice that has been heard in grand opers both in this country and abroad, and Mme. Debrimont, in conjunction with him, will introduce soles, duets and scenes from favorite operas and in rich and correct costumes. The Barra troup will introduce a number of clever instrumental numbers. Galletti's monkey comedians will, by special request, continue their engagement for another week. Dolan and Lenharr have been re-engaged, and will present a new travesty act, and Lillian Mason has also been retained, and will give a potpourri of new and taking ballads of a descriptive character. There will be a matinee this afternoon and the usual bill tonight. A number of strong features are booked for future appearance.

Nat Goodwin, as a laugh-maker, has a world-wide reputation, and his pieces have all achieved a lasting reputation. Not the least among these is the merry domestic comedy, "Confusion," founded on a simple yet tangible plot through which the complications are so numerous, intricate and laughable as to convulse the auditor. A pux dox and a chubby infant are guilty of making what seems endless trouble, and in the course of the action of the play they pass through a number of hands in a lively manner. There is a cyclonic succession of perplexities—ludicrous, lively and excruciatingly funny; indeed, "Confusion" may safely be called a comedy without a dull line in it. There is hardly a gulet moment from the first rise to the last fall of the curtain, and the humor is spontaneous. Mr. Eldridge will essay the role of Christopher Bliszard, a character similar to Prof. Babbitt in "A Night Off," in which this actor was so successful. Miss Marshall will be Lucretia Tickleby, a favorite character of hers. Miss Nannary and Mortimer Snow will be Mr. and Mrs. Mumbleford, and the remainder of the company will have congenial roles.

The big military comedy-drama, "The Blue and Gray," will be the flesta attraction at this theater.

(New York Sun:) Cissy Fitzgerald's wink has broadened so with her advance from burlesque to the legitimate that Hoyt's Theater will not be able to hold it if it (New York Sun.; Cissy Fitzgeraid's wink has broadened so with her advance from burlesque to the legitimate that Hoyt's Theater will not be able to hold it if it continues to grow. It has become a comprehensive dropping of the eyellid, which threatens to inclose haif the orchestra every time it falls. Persons in the front rows of seats, when Cissy takes the center of the stage, puts her hands on her hips, leans over the footlights, and fills her eye with an expression of rebellious invitation, clamber back from the stage for fear of being engulfed in the wink that they know is coming. But the lid falls slowly over that black eye builging with expressives, rests for a second in significant eclipse, and as it rises the audience tears itself reluctantly out of Cissy's confidence. The result of the wink in such a small theater as Hoyt's is still a matter of uncertainty. There never has been anything of the kind in the past, and what the consequences will be nobody can tell as yet. The wink is out of all proportion to the size of the house. Susceptible young men sitting near the stage have been carefully observed by the management since the opening night in order that any serious symptoms may be noticed and the wink abated. If its pressure prove too strong to the square inch.

Clasy herself may not be able to stand long the atrain of punctuating her part with winks. They take the place of commas, question marks and periods. Everything for Cissy begins and ends in a wink. She doesn't waste much of her time on expression or enunciation or the usual methods of ordinary actors. They are all very well for people whose winks do not express more than stage devices taken together. In the play Cissy, who is a music-hall singer, tells one of the characters that her real name is Price. "How many sisters have you?" he asks her. "Four,"answers Cissy; "all prices." She says this to the actor, but turns to the audience a wink that conveys such a sustained, penetrating, delicious expression of wickedness that it requires an effort f

Native Chinese actors have been engaged for the production of a pantomime called the "Dragon's Vest." There was a slight difference of opinion at one of the re-rearrais recently when one of the Chinese, named Hoy Noygen, picked up a stool and knocked the French stage manager down. The Chinaman was arrested. He was dragged to court, accompanied by his companion actors, who fell on their knees and implored the police justice not to cut off Hoy's head.

(New York Tribune:) It is singular that a number of theatrical managers in this city have raised the price of seats this season, although the times are hard and many traveling companies have been compelled to dieband, and the condition of the theatrical business throughout the country is depressing. The increase in price is in many cases unjustifiable, and the public will resent it. A theater of the highest class, which pays great sums to famous actors, and which produces plays in the most costly and sumptuous style, may be justified in charging $2 a seat for its best seats, but an ordinary theater which employs only cheap companies, and does not incur heavy expenses in producing plays, is pursuing a mistaken policy when it raises the price of its seats to $2 each. Such theaters are likely to be deserted by the discriminating public, and they ought to be.

The following is what William Archer, the London critic, has to say for Oscar Wilde in his column, "Masks and Faces," in the London Pall Mall Budget. It is apropos of the first production of Mr. Wilde's new comedy, "The Importance of Being Ernest:" "Three years ago, almost to a day, Oscar Wilde's first modern comedy was produced at the St. James Thearier. I am glad to remember now, when the curtain fell on the first act, I was already assured that, beyond the least shadow of doubt, we were face to face with a new force in the theatrical world. Here was a man who could write; here was ease, grace, distinction and phrase, the wit of a thinker, and a man of the world; and here was the power of inventing dramatic incidents, and as omanipulating them as to give them their fullest theatrical value. Here, in brief, was aborn playwright, who happened also to be a man of letters, both born and bred. So I felt; so I said; so I have felt and said after each new play which Mr. Wilde has produced in the interim; so I feel and say after

HE HELPED THE POLICE. The Greivance of a Witness in the Highbinder Case.

A sequel to the examination of Wong Chee and two fellow-highbinders, who were held Friday to answer to the charge of murder, comes to light in the shape of a written statement handed to Deputy District Attorney James, by E. H. Koch, one of the witnesses in the case. Koch, who was an employee of Jean Lenert, in the latter's notorious saloon on Perguson alley, claims that he lost his job for tell-ing on the witness-stand what he knew about the murder of Lou Suey.

Koch accuses ex-Police beterive Bosqui of collusion with the Wong Chee faction of Chinese and holds him responsible for his discharge. Koch's statement reads as "I have recently been in the employ of Jean Lenert as a helper in the saloon on Ferguson alley. During the time I worked there I saw ex-Police Officer Bosqui around the place frequently; in fact, he took his dinner there nearly every day. On the night Lou Suey was shot I was standing on the corner of Ferguson alley and Alameds street talking to Officer Blackburn and, of course, saw as much of what took place as ony one. After the shooting—about four or five days after—and before the examination of Chee, Chuey and Wing was commenced, Bosqui same into the saloon and had a long talk with Lenert. After he left Lenert came over to where I was working and said: "You had better keep out of trouble and not go to court at all," meaning as a witness against Chee and the other men.

That was my discharge. Lenert also said to me: 'We've got to make our living off of cuthroats and thieves, and you have too much to do with the policemen."

A well-arranged programme of new and novel specialties is to be presented at the Orpheum the coming week, commending tomorrow night. The frequent changes at this house, and the variety of attractions presented have caught the popular fancy, and big audiences have ruled during the week. Her performance is a marvel of skill and grace and peerless of its kind.

A fine array of artists are coming to fill the gap that will be caused by Bertoidi's absence, among them the La Regaloncita sisters, and La Graciosa and La Preciosa, from the Folkes Bergere, Paris, where their "fairy ballet" made a decided sensation. Their engagements in this country are confined to Koster & Bials, New York, and the Orpheum theaters, here and in San Francisco. The dancing of this group of artists is said to be a great novelty. Quite extensive and important improvements have since early in the winter been going on at the Natatorium, adjoining the City Hall on the south, and its old patrons will scarcely be able to recognize it, so greatly is it changed in appearance and modernized in actual conveniences. A number of new bathrooms have been added, all with best porcelain tubs: a steam heating apparatus of approved construction has been added. Provisions will be made for giving electro and vapor baths. Reception rooms for ladies and gentlemen are nicely arranged, and nothing seems to have been omitted anywhere that might add to the comfort or convenience of the place, and it is incontestably as complete and luxurious an establishment of its kind as can be found in the country. It is light, cheerful, well ventilated and spotlessly clean.

TENT, four tintypes 25c, Upper Main.

That a deep regard for the Lenten season pervades social swelldom is apparent in the total absence of any large functions. The festivals are confined to "small and earlys" that even the eagle-eyed reporter finds difficulty in discovering. The ladies fair are presumpthy spending their days finds difficulty in discovering. The ladies fair are presumably spending their days devotity in close attention to all the requirements of this solemn season, and retiring early to their couches, to acquire those fetching, yet elusive, charms, a clear complexion and bright eyes. There are rumors in the air, however, that many a thoughtful hour is devoted to that important adjunct of woman's happness, the dressmaker, and that the bewildering array of lovely gowns and headgear of "my lady" to appear after this season of ashes and repentance is over, is calculated to upset the mental equilibrium of even a monk.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

The Saturday night concert, given by the Young Men's Christian Association last night, was very largely attended. Prior to the rendering of the programme the parlors and reading-room were thrown open, which were thronged with men before the time of the concert arrived. Promptly at 8 o'clock the auditorium, which was especially decorated for the occasion with date palms and flowers, was opened and the gathering of young men passed from the rooms, taking seats in the hall which soon filled the lower por-

The following programme was given:
Piano solo—Frank Goodenow.

Reading—Miss Lillian A. Bennett.
Y.M.C.A. Guitar, Banjo and Mandolin Club.
Guitar and banjo duet—Hanneman brothers.
Vocal solo, "Since Berda Commenced Her Delsarte"—Miss Lillian A. Bennett.
The reading and vocal solo by Miss Bennett brought forth storms of applause from the appreciative audience, their loud and prolonged applause requiring a second response. This is Miss Bennett's first appearance before a Los Angeles audience. The selections of the Y.M.C.A. Guitar, Banjo and Mandolin Club were well received, also the reading by Miss Mattie Hare. At the conclusion of the programme the audience again assembled in the parlor and reading-rooms, and partook of refreshments, consisting of cofice and sandwiches for the small remuneration of 5 cents. Thifo Becker will give his last piano recital for this season next Fr.day evening at the Blanchard-Fr.tzgerald Hall. He will be ass.sted by Mrs. Josepha Tolhurst, and a specially artistic programme will be rendered.

The pupils of Mrs. W. B. Knapp gave a plano recital Saturday afternoon at her residence on South Brodaway. A programme consisting of eight numbers was well rendered. The pupils played in a pleasing manner, giving evidence of their thorough training.

The second rehearsal of the fleata chorus will be held next Thursday evening at the Blanchard-Fitzgerald Hall, and all singers are earnestly requested to attend.

EXPORT TRADE IN HEIRESSES

The habit of marrying foreign aristocrats, which is growing among wealthy American girls, is becoming more general all the time, so that it is now rather the exception than the rule when the daughter of an Ameri can millionaire weds one of her own countrymen. During the past couple of weeks the papers have been full of three such cases, in one of which the marriage has been accomplished, while in the others the "happy events" are to come off very soon. Miss Gould, the daughter of the distinguished railroad wrecker, was happy in securing a French count, who appears to be no altogether a blackleg, or entirely de-void of intellect, at the small rental of $200,000 a year. Since then it has been reported that Miss Leiter, daughter of the dry goods king of Chicago, is to become the bride of an English nobleman who is also a member of Parliament, and it is also said that immediately after this wedding Miss Florence Pullman, daughter of the gentleman who was the unwilling cause of such a big disturbance last year, will wed an Austrian count of ancient lineage but small means.

The money which is taken out of the country by these marriages with for eigners promises to deplete the coffers of the Union before long, and thus add to our financial complications. Of course, if American girls want to sell themselves for a foreign title, there is no way of preventing it, but the least that could be done would be to place a heavy export duty on American heiresses, so that the United States may retain some of the money which the fathers of these girls have been enabled to accumulate under the protec-

PRACTICAL TEMPERANCE WORK

A few days ago the papers contained reports of the opening in Chicago of a novel variety of saloon under the auspices of a Protestant bishop, who has secured the control of a new variety of drink manufactured from mal and hops and resembling beer in every way only it does not intoxicate. The which it is expected will be followed by many others, is fitted up just like an ordinary liquor establishnent and is said to have been, so far, quite a success. Something after the same style has been attempted in this State, at Santa Rosa, where a few days ago a temperance saloon was Rosa Temperance Coffee House Association. The idea has been taken from the temperance saloons in operation in Manchester, England. All manner of mild drinks are to be sold. Meals will be served at all hours, day and night, and all kinds of games may be played in the drawing-rooms to be run in connection with the saloon. The association was organized by a Protestant minister. Two hundred shares of stock in the enterprise have already been taken and many leading business men have been interested in the scheme. The bar will be run on the same plan as in a saloon, except that no intoxicating liquors will be sold.

This is a practical method of combating the evils which attach to the liquor traffic and should be more generally introduced. If such resorts as these were established on every side a greater inroad into the domain of the "rum field" could be made within twelve months than is likely to be accomplished by a century of meetings and sermons and fervid denunciations of the liquor traffic by well-meaning but injudicious and entirely unpractical people.

It is all very well to denounce the saloon, but to make that denunciation effective some substitute for the saloon must be provided. The rich man has his club to which he can repair, and has some kind of a home, but in the case of unmarried men, who perhaps live in a small, ill-ventilated apartment on some back street, the saloon about the only place where they can go of an evening to secure light warmth and sociability. A great many en fréquent saloons more for these reasons than for the sake of the liquor which is sold there, but of course they consume more or less liquor, and fre-quently the liquor habit grows upon

It is here where the good work of the temper ance saloon comes in. Several years ago there was some talk about estab lishing such an institution in Los Angeles, but several active temperance "workers" who were approached on the subject turned up their noses and said they were "not in the restaurant business." They preferred to confine their work to denunciations of the traffic rather than to do something practical toward its repression. In this respect they resemble the "workers" of the labor unions, who would out of a job if trouble between capital and labor were abolished. There are, however, in Los Angeles quite a more practical turn of mind and it would be a good thing if some of thes

An eleventh-hour repentance is said to be better than no repentance. Eugene V. Debs, the erstwhile leader of the embattled hosts of the A. R. U. according to a dispatch from Spokane. has come to the deliberate conclusion that strikes can result only in failure "I tell you." said Debs, "a strike can not succeed when it is against the United States government." Wise conclusion.

Debs said further: "Our recent ex periences have demonstrated that de feat is inevitable. Just as soon as strike is inaugurated disturbances will occur. Courts will be applied to, injunctions and mandamuses will ssued, and the leaders will be ar rested and thrown into fail. Then the

Just so, Debs. But you knew all this, if you are a man of ordinary inence, just as well a year ago as you know it now. It is no particular evidence of wisdom for you to come forward at this eleventh hour with promulgation of these well-known They are axiomatic. They are fundamental truths. A strike, per se, is not against any law nor any government. But a strike of any importance speedily degenerates into mob violence. And mob violence is nothing less than a warfare agains all law and against all government Government is merely the visible form or superstructure, of which law is the foundation. Therefore, so soon as vio lence is inaugurated, by means of a strike or by any other means, it be-comes a warfare not alone against organized society, but against local law, against State law, against national law, and against civilization itself. very existence of civilization de pends upon the existence and the enforcement of law. When war in any form is waged against law or civilize tion, it must be suppressed or civilizabefore it. These truths are as self-evident and as irrefragable as the demonstrations of Euclid. Unless you were an ignora mus or a dolt or a demagogue, you understood them as well one year ago as you confess to understanding them now. You were neither an ignoramus nor a dolt: it therefore follows that you were a demagogue.

Your present confession proves that your demagogy was premeditated, deliberate and designing. When you were sending out orders all over the country commanding your dupes to maintain their warfare against the government, you knew that you were sending them to their certain defeat and ruin. When you were assuring them that victory was certain, you knew that their defeat was as certain as the rising and setting of the sun. You knew that you were robbing thou sands of families of their means of support. You knew that many thousands of innocent women and children would go hungry as a consequence of your demagogic encouragement of a hopeless warfare against the govern ment. All this you knew; yet, know ing it, you persisted in your dema gogy until you had inflicted upon the servile creatures of your power the utmost of injury of which you were ca pable. Then, when forced by the inevitable to desist, you abandoned your helpless victims to their fate. Now, Debs, let us be charitable enough to hope that your professed repentance is sincere. If you would quietly retire from the public view it would be the wisest act of your unsay ory career. If you would engage in e honest employment, the mantle of forgetfulness, if not of forgiveness might hide your crimes. But as your retirement is too wise an action to be expected from you, let us hope that you will at least have the discretion to follow in the path outlined in your latest utterance. If labor has wrongs to redress, the Constitution and the laws of your country provide a bro and open highway by which the de-sired good can be reached, with wrong to no man and with benefit to all. Pursue this highway, and all will be well. The laws of this land are made by the people and must be obeyed, if you can induce a majority of the peobe made to your liking. But nothing can be accomplished by mob violence save the crushing of the mob. Remember this truth and shape your acaccordance with it. And finally, Debs, if your repentance is sincere, bring forth fruits meet for

The committee of the Illinois Legislature, appointed to investigate the cruelties alleged to have been perpetrated upon inmates of the Home for Female Offenders, has, from present indications, unearthed a state of affairs highly discreditable to the management of that institution. The investigation is not concluded, as yet, however, and the testimony thus far eard has been only that of inmates of the home. Such testimony is up; to be rather highly-colored, and it is possible that when the evidence is all in the aspect of the case may be somewhat changed. It is not well to jump to conclusions in ex-parte testimony. The alleged abuses may have been of a far less serious character than appears upon the surface. The managers institution should be given an opportunity to testify fully as to the matters in dispute, and they doubtles will be afforded such opportunity, if the investigation be made as thorough

It is given out by President Cleveland's friends that he is suffering from overwork, by reason of which he was obliged to take a sea-voyage to restore his wasted energies. It is to be hoped certainly, that Mr. Cleveland's health has been improved by the trip. In this connection it may properly be recalled that President Lincoln never complained of overwork, although he had as much work on his hands, during the civil war, at least, as Mr. Cleveland has had during the past two years. President Lincoln had the good sense to intrust to his subordinates a great deal of minor and merely clercal work, which they could do just as well as himself, or better. President Cleveland insists on doing "the shirtsleeve act," and perhaps some other acts which are not altogether conducive to health and longevity.

The women who have been lobbying for the passage of a female suffrage bill are much chagrined at their defeat They need not spend any sleeples nights on that account. Had the bill passed it would have been declared invalid, for it is not within the power of the Legislature to confer suffrage upon women. Those alleged lawyers who have deluded the women lobbyists into the belief that a legislative act would suffice to make them voters cannot have read the Constitution of California very closely.

It is altogether probable that the State of Kentucky will be found in the Republican column at the next Presidential election. Kentucky is tending nore and more toward the enlightened policy of protection, which will be the leading issue in the next campaign. The disastrous results of the Demofree-trade regime of the Cleveland administration is an object-lesson which even the kingdom of Henri Watterson will not allow to pass unheeded.

The Secretary of the Interior has evidently devised a neat scheme to avoid patenting any more lands to the Pacific roads until the government debts are satisfied. He proposes not to for-bid the issuance of any more patents, but to keep the clerks of the land-office so busy on other matters that they will not have time to make out the railroad patents. It's a great scheme, worthy the colossal intellect of Hoke Smith.

(Chicago Record:) The meanest man in the world has been discovered in Washington. His name is George Albright and for the last year or two he has been engaged to marry Miss Lizzle Jordan. The wedding day was fixed some time since, but George claimed that he was unable to fill his engagement because of the financial depression. But last week, when Lizzle pressed him, he agreed to have the wedding at once if she would loan him $1 to pay for the license. She gave him the money from her hard-earned savings, but the rascal went to the clerk's office and got a license to marry another girl. Miss Jordan has interruped the happiness of his honeymoon by having him arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses, and he now ties in jail.

A thousand hearts ceased beating then; dimmed with tears each eye;
The wife shrieked out her anguish, "O, Father! must he die?"
Downward, swiftly downward, sped the boat with fendish gie.

What the Legislature Has Also Passed the Bill Paying Illegal Angeles Bills.

SACRAMENTO, March 15.—(Special Cor-respondence.) The closing days of the birity-first session of the California Legis-lature are at thand, and a review of its lature are at thand, and a review of its work indicates that it has been rather a weak than a vicious body. To begin with, it repealed the Coyote-scalp Bounty Bill, but it passed the bill to settle $275,000 worth of these unpaid claims, of which the Governor claims to have information that at least $25,000 or $30,000 worth are illegal; it took the hats off tadles in places of public symptoms and decided. places of public amusement, and decided that a flost could not pass the seductive cigarette at his own table after coffee. Barbers must not lather after noon on Sundays or holidays, nor may the individual who believes that cleanliness is next to godliness "wash all his sins away" at bath-houses conducted as business establishments on those same holy days. This conglomeration of wise men will submit to the male population of the Staté the proposition of allowing women to vote on terms of equality with the lords of creation, but refuses the gentle sex the right of, declaring by ballot whether or not it desires that privilege. It made it a misdemeanor to defraud hotel or inn-keepers and has "theld up" the State for thousands of dollars in the way of hoary-headed old claims, some of which were so feeble with age that they had to be brought in on crutches. It has established a cow commission in the shape of a State Dairy Bureau; a horse commission (the State Veterinarian and his county assistants,) a third branch of the Legislature, in the form of a code commission, the state Board of Examiners to investigate personally at the various State institutions the necessity for the expenditures upon which they are compelled to pass. It has granted permission to Spreckels and others to do about as they like with fifty acres of San Francisco water-front, under the guise of assisting a popular railroad, but put its foot down on popular enterprise in the South by declaring that Los Angeles county would violate the Constitution if it issued bonds to build the Salt Lake road. In its wisdom, it has decided that there is a necessity for purity-in elections, but only in two places in the State—San Francisco and Los Angeles, for of such is the bill than passed. It decided that pure milk was a good thing, but when the Governor declared he knew more about fats, solids and nutritive qualities than the whole of the delirymen and farmers in the two houses by veboing the bill, the Senate, where the measure originated, uncekly submitted. I beknownst. to their coneagues sitting near by. The Constitution forbids the trading of votes, but who ever heard of a statesman being yanked up for saying: "You vote for my bill and I'll 'stand in' on yours—see?" and the scurrying about that daily occurs on propositions of this kind furnishes often the only animation of the daily session. Proconceived ideas kind furnishes often the only animation of the daily session. Proconceived ideas of stiff-necked Puritans who, with adamantine virtue shall pursue an infiexible course mapped out by their constituents and pass their bills by the sheer weight of their say so, fade into nothingness in this atmosphere of tinker and dicker, and the first lesson impressed on a novice is that the man who dares to say, "I am independent," and refuses to "stand in"—not for coin, necessarily, but for votes t for coin, necessarily, but for votes—

On beds of flowery case,

And so the Puritan rubs some oil into his stiffness, cames down "off the perch" and hustles around among his fellow legislators like the live man he has to be if he wants to accomplish anything for his constituents or the State, and very often when the fever is over and the nightmare is past he rubs his eyes in surprise to find that he is recorded as voting for some of the paradoxes, perhaps, which

The County Government Bill has been returned from the free conference committee with the recommendation that the Assembly concur and the Senate recede in certain of the amendments made by the two houses. The bill was rushed to the printer and will be put on its final passage tomorrow. The chief objection raised at this time comes from the Alameda county delegation in the Assembly, which is not satisfied with the way its salary schedule has been raised by the Senate delegation. Dodge of Oakland recognizes it is of no use to make a fight on it at this late day, and will let the Alameda Senators settle with the people.

Judge Davis will have his County Diviston Bill up for final passage tomight on the urgency file. The bill has been amended so that it is identical with the Senate, Judge Davis will not say that he is hopeful either of getting the bill through the Assembly, or the Senate if it passes the former. Assembly bills are now considered as matters of urgency by the Senate, so first, second and third readings of the bill and the vote on its passage, unless amended anew will be had in the word with the senate for a fight. The Assembly's refusal to concur in the Senate amendment to the Speacer bill reinserting the word "male" before t

The roll was called and Senator Mathews moved a call of the Senate, which was ordered and Senato Earl was brought in by Sorgeant-at-arm Bleekbery. Equiper proceedings under Senate, which was ordered and Senate Earl was brought in by Sorgeant-at-arm Blackburn. Further proceedings unde the call were dispensed with and the vot was announced. Those voting against the bill were: Senators Aram, Bert, Denison, Dunn, Gleaves, Hart, Holloway, Hoyt, Linder, Mahoney, McGowan, Mitchell, Seymour, Shine, Shippee and Toner. Senator McGowan offered the following explanation of his vote: "I vote 'no' upon Senate bill No. 875, as amended, because, "First—It is unconstitutional, in that it prescribes an arbitrary classification for a purpose not contemplated or permitted by the Constitution. (Art. xi, sec. 5, Const.; Darcy vs. Mayor, etc., city of San Jose, 38 Pacific Reporter, 500.) "Second—It delegates, in violation of the Constitution, legislative powers to the people that if properly conferred by the Legislature should be exercised by the board of supervisors. (Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal., 279.)

"Third—It attempts to confer upon an alleged board of trustees powers, duties and rights that cannot be exercised by any authorities but the board of supervisors. (Sec. 13, art. 11, Const., Yarnell vs. City of Los Angelee, 87 Cal., 603.) It is unconstitutional upon the further grounds that the bill endeavors to "pledge the faith of the county" and is against the spirit of the Constitution in that it contemplates a business to be conducted by a county or a board of trustees, not a part of or consistent with the functions of county government."

or a board of trustees, not a part of or consistent with the functions of county government."

Attorney A. S. Longley drew up an emendment to meet the "classification" objection offered by Mr. McGowan, and the amendment was introduced in the Assembly by Mr. Bulla, and was adopted. Mr. Longley is not over-confident of the passage of the bill, as he has ascertained that there is a strong Southern Pacific lobby against it, and that defeat in the Senate was due thereto.

The Los Angeles delegation has about cleaned up its bills. Mr. Kenyon of Long Beach has his all out of the way; Mr. Huber got through the Assembly the bills appropriating $200,000 and $83,000 for the maintenance and improvement of Whittler school that were passed in the Senate by the efforts of Senator Androus; the claim of R. B. Young for $2000 for architect's fees, on work done at Whittler, was also passed. Mr. Weyse has still four bills on file not acted on. His estray bill, which was defeated by Mr. Reid of Trinity, was reconsidered and passed. Mr. Pendieton says he has several bills dying on file, but that he succeeded in his main fight—that of getting through a constitutional reconsidered and passed. Mr. Pendieton says he has several bills dying on file, but that he succeeded in his main fight—that of getting through a constitutional amendment repealing the mortgage tax. He has evidently overlooked, however, his Board of Charities Bill (a duplicate of the Seymour bill,) on which he made his greatest fight, unless that in behalf of the anti-scalper bill is considered. The bill creating a State Board of Architects, which he fathered, at the request of the Southern California Chapter of Architects, was also lost only after a hard fight on his part, it being proposed by contractors, who feared they would not be allowed, in spite of an amendment to that effect, to draw plans. Mr. Bulla, who introduced fitty-seven bills, has quite a number not yet acted on, but he has had a large number passed and some of them have gone through the Governor's hands. Altogether, the delegation has accomplished as much, if not more than, any in the Assembly. If not more than, any in the Assembly.

The New York World tells how the life of a young girl was saved in Jersey City by an up-to-date trolley-car fender, as

"The life of a twelve-year-old girl was saved in Jersey City yesterday by the fender of an Erie trolley car on Newark avenue. The girl was Gussie Harris of telvidere. The motorman made vigorous efforts to stop the car. The brake did not catch and Gussie was thrown into the basket-shaped fender. The motor ran fully fifteen feet before its headway was checked. As it was slacking the girl rolled off into the mud. Several persons ran to her assistance, and she was picked up. She had escaped without a scratch, but her new dress was ruined. Spectators marveled at her escape from instant death."

H. Duston, a chain-gang guard, being the complaining witness. It is alleged that Huston went to the restaurant of the Machado sisters, on Commercial street, for dinner, and complaining about not feeling well, he saked the young woman waiting on him for a little liquor, which she furnished. Huston attenward swore out a warrant and had her arrested. Hearing was postponed till next Friday.

"SAMUEL S. WEBSTER."

Mr. Webster sends the above lines with a note in which he remarks that the Eagle's skit of last Sunday entitled "The End of the Passage," "leaves us in sad doubt."

Well, the Eagle's telescopic eye, which has been famous for many years, cannot "see" beyond the end of the passage and hence that is as far as he cared to pursue the subject.

He sees the multitudes going along in silence, but, paradoxically, alone; he sees them reach the dull, quiet, lonely slit in the earth where the passage sees them reach the duff, query, force; sees them lying there in peace with folded hands upon quiet hearts; with pulseless wrists; with eyes close shut in eternal slumber and for this mortal sight there, right there, is "The End of the Passage."

What the eye of faith may see is

is "The End of the Passage."
What the eye of faith may see is quite another matter, and it is with this sort of a pair of eyes that the Eagle's correspondent has taken the theme and enlarged upon it, but I beg to say that in this view of the case the passage has no terminus, it is a couring passage has no terminus, it is a contin-uous thoroughtare through which the multitudes march forever and forever across the glittering plains of eternity.

The poor of New York are to be given a chance to raise the plain ordi-nary spud of commerce on the idle tracts of land in that city, and the Eagle is glad of it. Fifth avenue will look just gay decorated with potato patches, and lots of them in a hill, and all around Central Park and along the Bowery one may now expect to see the agriculturists of the metropolis sprink-agriculturists of the metropolis sprink-ling medicine on potato bugs and chas-ing the chickens away in the most art-fully pastoral style possible. But watch out for the bursts of sur-prise when they find out over there in Gotham that potatoes don't grow on trees but have to be dug out of the ground!

Eugene Debs, who is responsible for more trouble and suffering than any man in this country since Sumter was fired on, has reached the conclusion that a strike is inevitably a failure.

What a pity it is that Mr. Debs's foresight hadn't been as good last summer as his hindsight is this spring. Had it been, how many men now walking the streets hungry would have been earning wages and living in peace with their employers; how many tattered and ragged bables would now be wearing pretty frocks and shoes with patent-leather tips onto them; how many care-worn mothers would now be buying Johnny new trousers instead of sewing ill-matched patches on his old ones; how many men who lie asleep under the dalsies would now be walking the streets in the sunshine and in the joy, of living? Oh, Mr. Debs, your thinker is too slow.

They Must Keep Off Sidewalks and Chain Their Wheels. The Chief of Police, acting under instructions from the City Council, has ordered the members of the force to arrest all bicyclists caught in the act of riding on the sidewalks. An ordinance was passed ten or eleven years ago, making it a mis-demeanor to ride or drive a horse or vehicle on any sidewalk within the city limits. At that time the bicycle had not yet come in general use, and the ordinance was passed without reference to it what yet come in general use, and the ordinance was passed without reference to it whatever. The law, however, holds that a bicycle is a vehicle, and entitled to the same rights and privileges on the public streets as other vehicles, and subject to the same restrictions. There being no special ordinance governing the use of bicycles, it is held they can be kept off the walks under the ordinance applying to vehicles generally. So can baby carriages and invalids' wheeled chairs, for they are vehicles also. The Chief's instructions, however, do not include these.

Bicyclists have frequently been warned off the walks by the officers, but no earnest effort has been made heretofore to enforce the ordinance as applying to them. Recently, however, reckless riders have run down so many people that it has become necessary to do something to suppress the nuisance. Warning is, therefore, given that all offenders will be promptly arrested.

Chief Glass also desires to warn wheelmen to keep their machines locked when not in use. Two or three thefts of wheels are reported to the police every day, and the officers have great difficulty in recovering the bicycles for the owners. There seems to be an organized gang that makes a business of stealing bicycles. Repainting, changing the handle bars or other trifling alterations make it almost impossible to identify the stolen property, so comparatively few wheels stolen are recovered. ble to identify the stolen property, so comparatively few wheels stolen are recov-red. It is also probable that many of the stolen machines are run to outside ne stolen machines are run to outside owns, or shipped to distant points. Altogether, these are troublous times for te festive wheelmen.

A NEW PHILANTHROPY,

A Plan to Aid Nervous and Backward Children.

Los Angeles is not behind other cities philanthropic movements, and among the latest measures for the benefit of the poor and unfortunate in her midst is the the eatest measures for the benefit of the poor and unfortunate in her midst is the establishment of a school upon the plan which obtains in many Eastern cities, for the special training of nervous and backward children. This school was opened on the 11th inst under the direction of Milss Allen, on West Seventh street, who comes with a heart devoted to her work, and with the generous indorsement of many of the hest-known medicos. Dr. Limdley, in writing of her, says: "While at Whittier I came in contact with several cases that apprised me of the necessity of Milss Allen's work."

Such a school is a necessity, born of the rushing process which prevails in the young. Children of good intellect so often are handicapped by weak nerves and frast bodies that they are either rushed through their preliminary education into a state of chronic nervousness or are left by the wayside and branded stupid. It is to make personal efforts with each one of the Bittle people for whom other methods of education are ill-fitted, and studying the special cases.

personal efforts with each one of the little people for whom other methods of education are fil-fitted, and studying the special weakness of them as individuals make the studies, hours and steps of promotion in accordance with the needs.

Miss Allen has had many years experience in the line of work she has taken up, and, by reason of her ability and earnestness, it peculiarly fitted to make it a success.

For the first offense he was fined $3, for the second $15, and he was ordered to appear Monday for sentence for the third. The fun that cost was ordered to appear Monday for sentence for the third. The fun that cost all this money occurred Friday evening. It appears that Williams, who is the proprietor of a small grocery store on East First street, near Wilmington, after imbibing too freely Friday evening, quarreled with his wife. Deputy Constable Beecher, who was passing the store, stopped to listen to the row. When Williams saw him, he got a revolver out of a drawer, and, going to the door, ordered Beecher to move on. Beecher declined. Williams then attempted to enforce his order, but Beecher threw him down and took the gun away from him.

Beecher informed Williams that he was an officer, and attempted to place him under arrest. Mrs. Williams interfered in her husband's behalf, and, while the officer was busy with her, Williams made his escape up a ladder standing against an old building. Officer Fay later appeared on the scene, and succeeded in finding Williams and placing him in jail.

INEN GRASS CLOTH, Hair Cloth and Fiber Chamois-three essential articles for use in the new sleeves and skirts; we have them in abundance. All-wool serges, 46, 48 and 50 inches wide; the price, 50c, 75c and $1 a yard; these three articles are better bargains than the usual run of bargains. New silks for the mandolin and guitar sleeves; they come to us direct from Japan, from France, from our own America; we say nothing about the waist; the sleeves are the all-important article; the price has been lowered on these silks to make your shopping more easy; 25c for the printed real India silks; 40c for the genuine wash Kai Kai silks; the real flawless Jap Kai Kais; they are the great sellers in the silk room. Real taffetas 50c a yard in a hundred or more styles; there is a reason for these low silk prices; the silk trade is more than doubling sales; the price is the inducement; the sales creep along as the price grows less. We keep apace of the times in the silk department. Oriental plaids for waists, $1, $1.25 and $1.50 a yard; they partake more of the tartan effects; the swell article for women's wear. Keep watch of us; the dress goods and silk departments are coming to the top notch of big selling in short order; look at the crowds now at the counter; compare with other stores; this is the place where the tariff reduction is a reality. All old goods are out of the way, and the dress goods stock is up to date in every way. Up to date with low prices. Up to date with new and complete stocks. Up to date in large sales. A RAILWAY KNIGHT-ERRANT.

[From a Special Contributor.]

The Chicago special bore an unusually eary load that day.

Vacation was over, and homeward travel vacamon was over, and nomeward travel had begun. There was not a single empty seat in any of the four aleepers, and at each stop there were new demands for

Spirited conversations between the wag-ner conductor and irate passengers who had failed to bespeak their berths, were frequent, and the last berth, the upper one ductor himself, had just been given up to a flurried, all-important personage who had insisted on his right to a whole section.

So now things began to quiet down. The passengers unbent from their dignity and began to compare vacation notes; the men betook themselves to the smoking compartment and the trainboy ceased, for a while, his journeys through the cars, offering his wares of candy, gum, books and magazines.

Trade this side of Niagara didn't amount to much. He had learned that by experience.

At first magazines sold pretty well—but the real demand did not come till after they had passed Suspension Bridge and the stop at Falls View Station made. Then was the time to offer "Souvenirs of Niagara" for sale.

Indeed, Dan knew about how many copies he would sell.

A few months' experience on the train had given him a pretty keen insight into the habits and desires of the passengers. now things began to quiet down.

two women.

"Oh, but you just must take her somehow!" he heard the younger of the women exclaim in a distressed voice.

"You see, there ain't any other way to send her, and her mother expects her sure, and she'll be at the station to take her off, and she'll be a real good girl, and not trouble you one bit, won't you, Bessie?"

He slept soundly, for the day had been a tiresome one, but after a while he be-gan to dream. He thought that Bessie had chewed gum till she grew smaller and smaller, and finally was nothing but one of the prizes in the bags of popcorn, a little sugar image which he was about to eat when—

Crash.

Dan was awake now. In an instant he was rushing toward the sleeper. Something dreadful had happened! The train shook and shivered and swayed.

There was a second crash, and a tearing sound and the end of the car was torn off, and a cloud of steam rushed in and about him.

The shock threw him from his feet, but he The smock threw him from his teet, out he crawled on. He must reach the sleeper. There was Bessie, he had promised to take care of her.

What would he say to the mother if she were killed?

Yet it really wasn't his fault.

Would he never get to the end of the car?

World he never get to the end of the car?

It seemed ages before he reached the platform, and his hand grasped the twisted breaks. Overturned on the track before him was the sleeper. The dim grey light of the early morning just showed its outlines. Farther than that he could not see. He jumped from the platform and landed on the upturned side of the car.

He could hear cries inside and through one of the windows, a head was thrust. With his heels he broke the glass of the window nearest him, then he crawled on to the next, and next, breaking each in turn, till finally he reached the fourth. This was where Bessie was.

Here he crawled in, but there was no one in the berth.

This was where Bessie was.

Here he crawled in, but there was no one in the berth.

It was lighter now. The sun must have come up very quickly.

Then a smell of smoke revealed the cause. The broken lamp at the end of the cause. The broken lamp at the end of the car had set the bedding on fire.

The flames were spreading fast.

Through the broken windows people were rushing, men and women, and there were groans and shrieks on all sides.

But he could see nothing of Bessie.

Could he have been mistaken in the car?

Suddenly from beneath a pile of clothing he saw a tiny hand thrust out, and he heard a stiffed cry.

Eagerly he pushed aside the heavy blankets and pulled the child out. By the light of the flames now rapidly nearing them, he could see how white she looked, and her eyes were closed.

Could he be too late?

He tried to climb out of the window, but the seat on which he stood, broken by the crash, fell beneath his weight, and he was thrown back into the car. He struck heavily and there was a sharp pain in his arms.

A sharp whistle recalled the conductor, and he put one foot on the steps of the car and stood, watch in hand, ready to give the signal.

"Sey, I'll kinder keep an eye on the kid

"All right—I'm willing—jump aboard will you, we're late now, and the conductor will you, we're late now, and the conductor.

Dan seized the child and placed her lightly on the platform, and the train begin to move. He listened to the parting directions of the two women, and threw back the silver half-dollar one of them tried to slip into his hand, with a toss of his head, as he shouted "I ain't no porter, and I'm a-doing this to 'blige you."

Then he held the child tightly while she waved her they handkerchief till the station was a mere speck in the distance.

Then he took her into the car and left her to emuse herself with the roils of lozengee, while he made a trip through the other cars. By the time he got back she had made friends with a lady across the aisle, who offered to share her berth with the child, and before the afternoon was over, she was playing games all over the car, and to Dan's intense amusement she typisted on eating supper with the man who had made the greatest fuss over his berth, but who, Beesle insisted, looked "instilled grandpa."

PIRATE TREASURE.

APTAIN AVERY AND THE GREAT MO GUL'S SHIP.

[From a Special Contributor-]

The adventures of two of the great buc-caneers of the Spanish main have al-ready been told—of Pierre le Grand and

ing of Panama.

Sir Henry Morgan was the last of the sir Henry Morgan was the last of the great buccaneers; after him came an entirely different sort of pirates, who preyed upon the ships not only from Spain, but of all nations.

After the peace of Ryswick, when England became allied with Spain and Holland against France, it became no longer possible, for the huccaneers to devastate evening came they salled away, yelling and cheering over their booty like madmen, leaving the Great Mogul's ship floating upon the water, stripped of her inestimable treasure, helpless and silent.

The pirate fleet was composed mostly of small 'sloops and brigantines. Capt. Avery's own ship was far the largest and most powerfully armed. Accordingly, for safe-keeping, all the treasure which they had captured was put aboard his ship.

People talk of honor among thieves. If there is such a thing Capt. Avery did not have any of it. That night when the fleet was all sailing toward Madagascar, there to share their booty according to agreement. Avery gave orders to change the course of The Duke; and when morning broke the other pirates found that the captain and all the inestimable treasure which they had just captured was gone, never to be seen again. Nothing was there but themselves, the boundless stretch of ocean and sky.

And now for a while in the gloom and indistinctness of that far away past, we see only a dim image of the figure of Avery. We knew that he came with his ship and his pirate crew to Boston, in the Americas, where for a while he and his men were seen about the streets and the harbor front; strange, suspicious figures, now and then tippling and drinking in the taverns, but always appearing objectless, aimless, morose, sullen.

land would no longer allow Englishmen and Dutchmen to rob their allies, the Spaniards.

So it was that buccaneering came to an end.

At that time the European nations had just fairly begun that trade with the East Indies that afterward poured such a flood of wealth into the western world. Already a great stream of commerce came and went around the Cape of Good Hope and up back of the Island of Madagascar and through the passage between Johanna and the smaller islands. It was here that these later freebooters found fresh fields for their enterprise.

The West Indies, no longer open to freebooting, were comparatively near to home, but here on the further coast of Africa, the would-be pirates were so far away from all the rest of the world that no law could touch them. It only depended on good, hard stubborn fighting to win almost whatever fortune they choose.

The later pirates were called, not buccaneers, but marconers.

If you will look in your dictionary for the word "marcon," you will find that it means "To put ashore on a desolate island." It was from this meaning that these later pirates gained their name, for it was thus that the pirate captains used to serve those of their crew who mutinied against them; or, if the mutineering crew were stronger, it was thus that thou how else to dispose of the crew, they marconed them on some deserted island, sailing away and leaving them to their fate.

Among the earliest of the famous marconers was Cant Averw, who centured

Among the earliest of the famous marooners was Capt. Avery, who captured the ship of the Great Mogul together with his daughter, her court and all the inestimable treasure in jewels and gold.

The earliest known of Capt. Avery is as first mate aboard a ship called The Duke, which after the Peace of Ryswick, had been fitted out by the Spanish government at Bristol, in England, and sent to the West Indies to act as a Guarda del Costa, or coast guard, to keep away the French smugglers who used to sail over from Martinique to travel along the coast of the Spanish main.

The commander of The Duke was one Capt. Gibson of Bristol. He was, as the historian expresses it, "mightly addicted to punch, so that he passed most of the time on shore in some ordinary."

Thus it came about that the ship and the ship's company were left altogether in

Were from the West Indies, were only to willing to listen te him. So one night while the captain lay stupified in a drunken sleep in his cabin the mutineers, under command of Avery, slipped the cable and sailed away of a Dutch frigate of forty guns, which did not seem to think it worth while to stop them. Meanwhile Capt. Gibson slepton, snoring like a good fellow. Nor did Avery disturb him, allowing him to sleep as fairly awake as he could be in his tipsy condition the mutineer put him into an open boat with those few who refused to join them, and watched them as they pulled away toward the distance on the control of th king's ransom.

The historian of this famous pirate says that he designed to sell his treasure and perhaps to settle in Boston, but that there was nobody in that little colonial town who knew the value of such gems or would dare to handle them.

So the pirates sailed away back to England again. They were separated, some going this way and some that, Capt. Avery settling in Ireland, his leather bag of jewels still hung about his neck. But he himself was now grown so poor that he had to beg his way from place to place without even food to eat except what charity gave him. His vast treasure might as well have been so many pebbles from the scashort, for he was afraid to offer a single one of his diamonds for saie for fear lest suspicion should be raised against him.

At last it occurred to him that maybe

At last it occurred to him that maybe some of his friends in Bristol might help him, for he knew that there were merchants there who dealt in precious stones. Accordingly he set about returning to England. He was too poor to pay for a passage and so he had to work his way across the Irish Channel, landing at Portsmouth and walking afoot down to Devonshire as far as Bideford. There he put up at a poor inn and sent word to some friends in Bristol whom he could trust to come to him.

The fame of Capt. Avery had traveled before him and his friends came down by post in arkwer to his message.

They fo and Capt. Avery in the top room when the arrived. He was half tipsy, but he had sufficient with left to ask of the landlord that he and his friends should be shown into a private room. Then he took out a leather bag from his breast and poured out before them upon the rough deal table such a streaming, glistening heap of diamonds, rubles, emeralds, sapphires as dazzled their eyes and left them stanting dumb-founded. Then the pirate screped the jewels back into the leathern tug again and hung the bag about his reck, where it had been before, and he was just as poor as ever.

He and his friends sat form long time discussing what was to be done. At last it was determined that certain honest, respectable merchants of Bristol should be asked to tain charge of the ewels and to dispose of them from time to time as they could.

A BOY AND GIRL LEAGUE.

NEW YORK, March 10.—(Special Correspondence.) At Rutherford Place in New York, the Messiah Home, a "children's charity for children," founded by a few young girls, has always been largely aided by the little ones. But it is only recently that the managers have conceived the idea of forming a League of Junior Patrons and Patronesses. To celebrate the inauguration of the league, there will be a prize exhibition of photographs held at the New York Society of Amateur Photographers. The idea is a very unique one. Mothers are requested to send baby's photograph from any part of the United States, with 31. the price of admission into the league. These photographs are to be hung about the walls and inspected probably by hundreds of interested people on April 4, 5 and 6.

Thirty-eight medals are to be presented—rules governing some of them are as follows:

I. The grand medal of the exposition to the most popular baby; to be awarded by the vote of those attending the exhibition.

II. Two silver medals to the most per-boy baby and girl baby, to be awarded by a committee of artists.

IV. Two silver medals to the brighest boy baby and girl baby, to be awarded by a committee of teachers.

V. Two silver medals to the jolliest boy baby and girl baby, to be awarded by a committee of actors.

VI. Two silver medals to the dearest boy baby and girl baby, to be awarded by a committee of grandmothers.

This gives an excellent chance for all the babies in the country to get a medal without standing the fatigue of the journey, or of sitting still for three days. Mrs. J. Welles Champiney, the manager of the exhibition and wife of the well-known artist, says from the present outlook, which her mail vouches for, we are growing a race of beautiful men and women.

CHARMING DECORATIONS. Pretty and Inexpensive Modes of Adorning Cottage Walls.

[From a Special Correspondent.]
In Wallace Bruce's cottage down at the Florida Lake Chautauqua the walls of rough plank are overhung with sha net and unframed water pictures caught in the meshes. Over the mantel an oar is fas-tened from which the net hangs as a por-tiere. In the center of this is a large sea picture, its corners caught down by four

The arrangement was so artistic and cheap that I wondered why more mistresses of summer houses didn't think of putting up simple mural decorations that could be swept away when closing up time came in the autumn.

Two or three days in the spring time—if the weather keeps one indoors—can be given over to preparations that would make the walls of the summer house more highly attractive than the usual array of inferior, badly framed pictures that are resorted to through indolence.

A thorough search of the weekly and monthly magazines reveals dozens of excuisite pictures in black and white, pictures that are copies of famous and desirable works of art. These posted on thick white water-color paper with a margin of an inch, can be pinned in the wall. If the wall paper is colored, be sure that the frame is tinted to harmonize with it. But be cheary in the use of color, for violent tones are best avoided by the amateur. Best adopt white, cool tones of gray, green or palest blue.

They get dusty-yes—but after three months use are swept away like cobwebs, with no more thought given them.

Photographs can be charmingly arranged on panels of ribbon. Pale blue or pink strips with favorice photographs, either of artists in the dramatic and musical world, or friends, arranged one above the other, form a pretty bit along the facings or Passe-partout frames are inexpensively made if one buys the glass and has it cut: at any glazier's to fit the picture. Cut a piece of pasteboard the same size, and the water-color paper that goes at the back, must be a quarter of an inch wider to give it room to fold over the glass. Make a small suit at the back of the paper before putting on the grass, thread a small curtain ring through it on a piece of tape. Paste either end of the tape down inside the pasteboard and this gives the hold for the picture to hang by. Then place the picture on, put the glass over and slitting the edges of the water-color paper, fold it over to make the passe-partout margin. Six or eight of these can be made in a short time.

For prints that do not require glass, the prettleet of mountings can be made on band-box tops and bottoms. They are cut circular at the edge, and the hole in the center, which admits the picture, is also oval. A clight wash, if any color is put on to relieve the shine of the cardboard, and a band of silver or gold one-fourth of an inch wide outlining the edges makes a decidely pretty finish. These can be hung up with a short loop of narrow ribbon.

A shadow wall is one of the prettiest ways of preparing a celling. She its an ingenious woman who thought it out last summer, and the hostesses who follow suit will give their guests a treat. The wall was painted the clearest yellow—as near sunshine as possible. There was a luster in the paint that resembled the gint of surbeams. Against this she held long vines and outlined their curves and stems. With a light gray wash these were painted in drocping form from the celling at the sides to meet the black wood dado that went about the room. The effect was exquisite. It gave one the impression that the sun was shining through a vine trellis and throwing their swaying branches and throwing their swaying branches on the ceiling and walls. One waited for the breeze to stir them. The pictorial ef-fect on the wall was lent by a few simply-framed water colors of growing fruit. HENRY STERLING.

DON'T STOP TO THINK.

There was a gentle antelope

In flight from their capacious maws
She vanished like a wink,
And lived to tell the tale, because She didn't stop to think.

Barly in the present century there was an organized brotherhood of highwaymen, slave thieves and cut-throats, which, under the masterly direction and control of of John A. Murreil, had its centers of ackinon and rendeave as established at conversent intervals from Louisville to New Orleans.

Murrell himself was not only the master spirit, but the chief malefactor as well, in all the most outrageous doings of this farreaching chain of outlaws. He was a shrewd, bold, magnetic man; fearless, conscienceless and enterprising to a degree beyond anything ever before known in Arserica.

It was in Mississippi and Louisiana that he became most terroble to all law-abiding people. There were no raliroads then no express companies to prey upon, very few bank vaults to blast open; but the common highways of travel, the country roads meanifering through sparcely-settled regions were haunted day and night by the spirit of medieval lawlessness in the form of a solltary horseman armed to the teeth and riding in search of a traveler with heavy money-bags.

for a journey in the dark to a distant neighbor's house.

He had covered up the dead and barred the doors and windows; he had even mounted the horse before he thought of the money, which was in a buckskin bag hidden among some articles of clothing on a corner shelf. With the prudence so characteristic of frontier folk, he at once returned and got the bag. Naturally, this treasure gave him a feeling of danger and responsibility. He hastily tooked about for his father's pair of horse-pistols, and, finding them, hung them on his saddle bow, mounted and rode away through the night.

When he had reached the edge of the die bow, mounted and rode away through the night.

When he had reached the edge of the little clearing in which the cabin stood, he heard a horse snort, and, turning in his saddle, he was surprised to see dimly outlined two horsemen at the gate; they seemed to be making ready to dismount and enter the house. His first thought was to return immediately and beg their help; but something checked him. They were acting strangely, and a chill went through his blood. Intuition told him that they were robbers, and that they had come to take his father's money.

One of them went and knocked on the door, the other stood by. Again and again the knocking was repeated, then the door was kicked in. All this passed in a few seconds. Fred was so scared at first that he felt weak and dazed. The men entered the house and soon a light flashed and he could see that they were rummaging.

At this point Fred's horse neighed shrilly; the men rushed forth. In fact they bucket compared to the wastefulness and extravagance of the late Democratic Congress and the administration.

The Dockery Commission, on its own showing, has made, or provided for making, a saving in two years of about $460,000, but the Fifty-third Congress, Democratic in both branches, has during the same time appropriated $993,000,000, which is $5,000,000 in excess of the appropriations of the much-belabored "Billion-dollar" Congress, and this, too, was attained at the cost of a reduction of $42,000,000 in the pension appropriations.

There is this, however, to be said for the Dockery Commission, that its powers were limited, and that it has probably done as well as it could. That it could do no more is the fault of the Democratic party rather than of the commission. Then, too, the reformation made is a beginning, and that is something, for it will be easy after a time to build on to the work of the commission and make it something of real, practical value.

The report of the commission contains some recommendations not yet acted upon which, it is estimated, would bring the annual saving up to nearly $450,000. Among these is the abolition of the office of naval officer. Nobody has ever yet been found who knew what the naval officer in the customs service was for except to sign his name when and where instructed so to do, and draw his salary. The new Congress will do well to take up the report of the Dockery Commission, carry out many of its recommendations and then add to it in many ways and respects in the interest of true economy.

plains that no woman's domestic salvation is secure till she gives some space and attention to blue and white in her rural domain—at least one or two rooms should show the possibilities of this spring-like and cheerful ornamentation.

Now, nothing fresher and daintier can be well imagined than a wall paper showing the always light and graceful empire pattern of tall torch and intertwined garlands, worked out in clear, delft blue on an egg-shell-white background. Whatever may be the size and proportions of a room it cannot but appear more cool

In blue and white bedrooms for instance the windows are to be hung with a pretty soft, white, madras muslin, embroidered with blue dots about the size of a 5-cent plece. This is very inexpensive, less so than the new oriental net, woven of

There are built like dong, low tables, with an undershelf, where the hot water can is to be set out of the way, while the uppershelf merely has a frame work of birch filled in with blue and white glazed tiles. Painted, iron rods are fitted on just under the end edges of the top shelf, for towel and sponge racks, and the whole is fitted with blue and white china just to match the tiles. Instead of being awkward and unornamental as a washstand usually is, in this guise it is a distinct addition to any bedroom.

FAN SCREENS.

Perhaps prettiest of all the odd bits of furniture for these summer bedrooms are the chintz and cretonne-covered screens made to fold and open on the principle of a fan. At the base they are fitted on small stout brass frames that have four little castors, and when the screen is not needed it may be shut up into one single broad stick and rolled into a corner out of the way. When in use it opens as a big fan covered with flowered chintz and standing as high as a woman's chin.

Such are the plans already on foot for beautifying a country house at small cost, with colored mattings on the floors, cushioned willow furniture and denim tufted "grandmother" chairs. Women who have ample purses from which to decorate their summer homes are furnishing in mahogany and dark oak. Now that the supply of good antique pleces of mahogany is wellnigh exhausted, the cabinet-makers are turning out beautiful copies of old Spanish dressing-tables made of this tropical wood. These are not carved but wonderfully polished, have octagon-shaped mirrors hung between straight supports, and in place of brass much of the decoration is done in silver, the hinges, knobs, locks and keys moulded in charming antique forms. Blue and white French cretonne, lighter of weight and more durable in color than that of English or American make, is taking the place of chints that is vastly more expensive, and in rooms hung with glazed chints the incomparably lovely Liberty sateens and velveteens are employed. These come in delicious shades of rose, blue, tan and green, figured over with toveliest flowers of the garden and meadow. The sateen forms draperies and the velveteen makes tufted oushions for easy, willow chairs that are ensmeled in green or rose, as the prevailing color in the room may dictate. There are yet other materials used as hangings most appropriately in a burlaps, walled woom. These are green and brown cooton corduroy and damasked denim. The blue and gray denim has been put of fate to use as a tufted covering of deep arm chairs and settees, which, as it is cheap, when once grown shabby, is inexpensively renewed and tufted down with white buttons and trimmed with blue and white cord and fringe shows up with splendid effect.

But he has sternly rebuked all such aspirations, and has informed the nobles and aristocratic elements that he would stand firmly where his father stood and maintain the absolutism of the Czar without impairment at any point. It is just possible that he may live to regret this pronunciamento. The grand difference between this young gentleman and his lamented father lies in the fact that Alexander had demonstrated his capacity and fits faithfulness as an absolute ruler, while Nicholas has yet to give some evidence of possessing even average ability and the faithfulness as an absolute ruler.

Wings of jet or lace, or ribbon, mixed with huge pompons of closely-massed roses, project far beyond the ears. Under these jabot ends of lace that almost touch the shoulders, and at the back of the bonnet, there as if tucked rakishiy in the hair, there will be sometimes high Spanish comb effects in gauze and spangles.

LACE AND ILLUSION COMBS. LACE AND ILLUSION COMBS.

These millinery combs are a distinct feature of imported bonnets, and they are especially becoming to dark, melancholy types. They are made of thin lace, as well as gause, though when of lace they are only finely wired; when of gause, along with the spangles, there will be an outsining in fine jet or gitt. In shape they imitate exactly the rounded or square-topped Spanish combs, but a later and charming design in these novel trimmings, is a tail, half-furled fan that is set dashingly to one side.

FOR A SPANISH TYPE OF BEATITY.

FOR A SPANISH TYPE OF BEAUTY.

An imported bonnet in black lace and red roses, that has a true Castilian air—and an airmost fearful coquetry—is backed by one of these fans.

The lace is as fine as a spider's web, patterned meaningly enough with flies, an exquisite pointed border forming the tops of the fan, which is shaped with a hair wire, and so adjusted that it books as if placed sidewise in the colfure. A scarf of the face arranged in two doose pompons and ends widen the sides; and back of these ends, which are short and bunchy, neetles two knots of black red roses, as if also in the hair. Altogether it was a very featching bit of heargear—and abominably wicked.

BRAIDED STRAWS.

In the matter of her street bonnets, the oldish woman can choose from many curious shapes never seen before, and many of them demonstrated in a fine straw braid that is as delightful in tone as texture. Mild browns and tender moss greens are most pleasing in this braid, but a particularly captivating bonnet has a triangle in ivory white with trimmings of black lace, black velvet and white satin-rosettes.

Other braid millinery is in the shape of turbans, whose two-inch brims are dented in places or often tied together over the top with ribbons or velvets, after the manner of soft baskets for sailors and gypsy country hats. Flowers are invariably the chief trimming of these last and never were big-hat flowers more charming than now.

THE VOGUE OF FIELD FLOWERS.

Orchids and other weird hot-house blooms have given way to all the sweet things of the old-fashloned posy garden; to musk roses and spice pinks, daffodils, nasturtiums, rose leaves and sweet mignomette; even the dear old blue larkspur we have known in our zchool days and fashloned ipto wreaths and crosses is seen.

RIBBON NOVELTIES.

With great masses of these, large hats for country and seashore wear are made parther big and beautiful by vast knots of ribbon that has a taffeta finish and often a flowering border or corded edge in a different tone. The crowns of these hats are not high, though smallish, and brims are waved slightly to a perceptible cock at the left side. Trimmings are put on to have an extreme width effect. A monster chapseau of black Tuscan with a vast front bow of dusky net, was widened at the sides with clumps of black feathers sewed on the brim and highest at the left.

Another of black wired tulle had great windmill arms starred with jet, compassing entirely both front and sides. The first was picturesque and becoming; the last distinctly ugly. A huge Maud Muller out-of-town affair was particularly ravishing.

The crown of this hat, which, together with a flower boa and a flower parasol that matched it, had been designed for a well-known New York beauty, was of black straw. The brim of rough green straw, showing an under glint of flame, lifted slightly at the left; two great fly-away bows of moss green taffeta ribbon widened it, and the remainder of the trimming was an extensive wreath of moss rose buds in flame satin, nestling in abundant foliage.

This bonnet was not in the least suggestive of romance; from stem to stern it breathed that properly ordinary air that our mothers have taught us is to the masculine mind necessary for bonnets and human happiness. Yet it was pretty in a way and gave ideas for using up fragments of millinery.

PROFUSION OF LIACE.

Lace in both black and white plays an important role in spring millinery.

Often entire bonnets will be made of it, as was the black enchantrees described, and besides the Spanish effects, there are Russian effects, Bretonne effects and Dutch effects.

All of these bonnets fit snugly and come well down to the ears, and are worn far back on the head after the fashion of the headdresses of European peasant women.
Many, indeed, with their vast width and flatness have the looks of caps.

FOR THEATER WEAR.

Bonnets for strictly-theater wear are more minute affairs and are prominently flowered. A bunch of bewildering millinery that might be worn by either maid or young matron to the play, begins with a wreath of tiny pink crush roses that are drawn together until they form one unbroken line that lies flat over the head from ear-tip to ear-tip.

Next in evidence comes a narrow white lace barbe of misty fiveness.

This is stretched plainly in front of the roses and is bunched delicately at the sides, at one of which rears a black feathery aigrette, giving tone to the whole. Back of the whole affair, to be seen from the front, two great rhinestone balls with FOR THEATER WEAR.

should cross the same line with each successive step. "Walking a crack" brings you on one step in walking correctly; the toes should be much turned out, almost to the angle of 45 deg., but not quite. Many defects are cured by simply achieving this. For instance, you by this means avoid bringing down the heel first; in an ordinary shee the foot comes down altogether; in a heeler's sandal the toe strikes the ground first, and that is the ideal way, the way the Greek women stepped.

If you start out to simply avoid striking the heel first without further knowledge of the correct position of the foot, ten to one you make yourself highly ridiculous. The next thing is the length of the step. It should be just twice the length of the foot, and is measured from the hollow of the instep of one foot to the hollow of the instep of one foot to the hollow of the instep of the other.

Now, to practice these points take a long tape; new bits of red flannel on it at intervals corresponding to the proper length of your step; stretch it across as long a room as you can get top practice in, and spend an hour a day, or less possibly, walking the tape and having your foot cross one of the bits of flannel at each step. For a while you will do this badly, walk worse than ever, but when this action has become automatic, you can take up other points and progress toward grace. Two things are most important, the legs should be moved from the thighs; the motive power should begin there, just as a boy throws a stone from the shoulder. Then the chest should be held up, and a the body so carried that the walker will have a feeling, if she wetches for it, as if she were being pulled along by a string coming from the middle of the breast, as if she were bereasting the air, as a swimmer breasts the waves. This sounds fanctful, but it is only accurate. The feeling attests the fact that you are walking well, even though you have not achieved all the subtle poise of the Diana of the Louvre.

THE CARBON PRINT MAKES ALL WOMANKIND BEAUTIFUL

So that Fat or Lean, Fair or Plain, Any Woman and Every Woman Take a Lovely Picture Of Themselves.

NEW YORK, March 10.—(Special Correspondence.) Any woman who can boast a decent gown to her back, whose expression is not forbiddingly sour and whose forburds are not herolegically deformed. Can friends never appreciated her good points

Trends never approximately before.

To gain this she must climb to the studio of one of the modern artist photographers, many of whom are settled in New York, who have introduced the costly, but eautiful carbon and platinum prints into popular favor, and who consider pose all important for a good photograph. So sreat is the emphasis they lay on this point and to such advantage have they studied its effects that be a woman stout or lean, tall or short, her chances for a satisfactory picture are almost equal to those of a professional beauty.

PHOTOGRAPHIC TYRANTS. But these masters of the camera are auto

But these masters of the camera are autocratic in their studios, and she who comes for a sitting must accept their will not only as to pose, but how to dress and arrange her hair. Some times a half-dozen costumes must be submitted to the critical eye before a suitable garb is chosen. The photographer's demand is usually for a dress that is white or pale tinted, since few rich colors show up well before a camera, and an evening toilet is what he is apt to suggest and insist upon.

Nearly every woman, he rightly argues, appears to best advantage with bare arms and throat, in soft, dainty draperies, that cover a multitude of sins, while on his own assurance the writer has it that in nine cases out of ten a woman is most graceful when seated and her full figure photographed. Only that tenth individual can stand easily and gracefully, and he forbids the use of any more elaborate ornaments than pearls and flowers, since a vast array of jewels is not considered in good taste and polished cut stones show white and dull in a photograph.

FOR FAT SUBJECTS.

"A stout woman," he says, "should always wear an ample train, cut the shoulders of her decollete bodiec open in a point, have her elbow sleeves full, but soft, and be seated in a high gothic-backed armchair. Her hair must be heaped on top of her head, the tip of a pointed slipper showing, her body inclining slightly forward, for then, when the light is cast on her from above the outline of wasts and bust are softened into shadow. Later the plate is cleverly treated before any prints are made from it. The under throat is touched out, or a shade laid in to hide it, just as we round off sharp elbows and the shoulder points of thin women or soften the profile of a pointed chin. In addition, we are apt to cut up the corners of the lips to give the face a brighter and more amiable expression.

The throat length boa of the rosebuds and foliage had ends of the taffeta ribbon which also tied the bandle and tops of the parasol that was made of black gauze scattered heavily with the flowers.

These foral neck fixings and parasols may rightly come under the head of millibery, and from the indications given they bid fair to figure largely in summer they bid fair to figure largely in summer when studied and properly posed will show when studied and properly posed will show the staffed and properly posed will show the parasols and pa "Throw cross lights on the thin girl when studied and properly posed will show up as the most graceful ornament in a picture.

"We no longer tolerate the old attitudes of the head upon the hands of photographs in fancy dress, in theatrical or masculine poses and in artificial light. The face is now only slightly turned from full view, drooped ever so little, the eyes glancing upward without straining, which lends the face a soft, half-plaintive expression, while the whole photograph is deepened by perspective background done in soft, shadowy figures. A lawn vista is given a pretty girl in white, who bends over a rose-wreathed hat in he lap, or a suggested conservatory entrance or distant, tall, painted window, with palms and draperies."

The heedful photographer will always permit his subject to retain her fan, a handful of flowers or scarf in one hand. Repose has taken the place of attitudinizing, save when occasionally a studied copy is made in pose of one of Romeny's portraits, and the whole is printed in carbon and platinum, and the proof mounted on a very large dull-white card that leaves a wide margin all about the photograph. These prints, always longer than they are broad, are used for handsome full-length pictures that show an elaborate background. For busts an oval print is given, mounted on a great expanse of board and meant to fill gilt ribbon frames.

GROUPS ARE FASHIONABLE.

GROUPS ARE FASHIONABLE.

Never more in favor than today among the fashionable women are grouped pletures, to which three persons at most are permitted, and their poses carefully studied with a sharp eye to naturalness and grace. Sisters in dancing gowns are taken just floating off to waitz in each other's arms, or one leans against the plano, while the other half turns on her music tabouret to speak. A mother and daughter sit in low chairs beside a teatable, chatting over their cups. Two pretty matrons in evening gown read a note, one over the other's shoulder, while for children the photographers are borrowing suggestions from famous artists as Sir Joshua Reynolds, Sargent, Greuse and Mme. le Brun.

Concealing His Record. (Detroit Free Press.) By some chance a member of Congress, not in Washington, had fallen into the clutches of the policeman.

"Do you know who I am?" he asked with the same manner he would have employed had he been in Washington.

"I can't say that I do," replied the policeman, willing to please.

"I am a member of Corgress, sir," and the statesman's cheef puried out, albeit he was rather unsteady on his legs.

"Sh—sh!" exclaimed the officer warningly, "Don't give it away and you'll get a lighter sentence."

Out on balconies and in tea-rooms the stout, useful and cheap Sideri blinds are going to be more than ever put to practical use and unpolished and unpainted willow lounging chairs cushloned with cool green and tan cotton corduroy tuftings, bound with leather, while every well-equipped balcony is to be supplied with half a dozen round leather-bound cushions, meant for those who prefer the steps as a lounging place. The virtue, however, of all these tasteful devices for house decoration is that the best of the materials and furnishings are well within the range of economical purses. The materials and furnishings are well within the range of economical purses. The pretty birch furniture is no more costly than white enamel. The washable French cretonnes, demins and corduroys, madras muslin, oriental net and white picture frames are all delightfully possible to the amateur decorator, who can scarcely make a mistake in choosing among them to beautify ther country cottage. "And what about the terrible hotel charges in London?" queried the fascinated listener.

"We will leave them to be tested by those who have money. We would leave our luggage at the station, take a cab by the hour—cost 48 cents—a hansom would cost 60 cents—that would be 24 cents for you and the same for me.

"In this way we would get over ground faster in hunting up the addresses carefully chosen from friends who have tested the houses.

"I know some dear old lodgings in good parts of London, too, where we can get a nice little suite with breakfast for $8 or $10 a week, $5 each. Lunch and dinner we can pick up anywhere, the queerer the restaurant the better, like the old Scheshire Cheese, for example. Two shillings (or 48 cents) would get us a delightful little dinner every night, and if the weather is too wretched to permit of our going out, I am sure our landlady will supply us for a small consideration. Our suite will have sleeping-rooms, sitting-room and bath, so we will be comfortably provided for under all circumstances. I speak knowingly of the lodging-houses, because I have a number

"Your arithmetic is correct. We might scratch off ten or twelve dinner charges, for I know a number of pleasant Americans and we can carry letters of introduction, so that will probably mean a dozen invitations, but we only include that among the probabilities."

"Will $85 give us a chance to see anything of the town?"

"Of course, we can't bring back new fall hats or a winter gown, or even dozens of gloves, on the $200 limit, but you'll find American glothes cheaper and pretier than English ones, and you'll realize that you've made about the best $200 investment in mental security bonds you everthought possible."

"Well, it's settled," said the artist. "I will engage my berth temorrow," and now their friends can hear nothing else but how much these two young workers are going to see on $200, and from the experience of one who has done the same thing—it as safe to predict that they will accomplish all they have laid out. Great Merriment Among Suffering Young Ones-Why "Timmy" Was Glad to Leave the Tenement-Maggie, the Pet of the Asylum-Isadore, the Hebrew Child's Simple Prayer for the Dying.

NEW YORK, March 11, 1895 .- (From Our Regular Correspondent.) Most peo-ple are getting ready to be married, but we are not. We are cutting out paper And when I say "we," I mean my little Jew friend Isadore and your humble little Jew friend isadore and your number servant. When I was a very little girl gaper dolls were esteemed of some worth, but not very much. Now they have reached a stage of magnificence that makes reached a stage of magnificence that makes them longed for by all small people, who have a delightful time playing that these beautifully-tinted, well-dressed ladies and gentlemen are "really and righty." You can buy a paper coach, with a gentle-man correctly dressed driving a four-in-hand, with the Princess of Wales sitting beside him, and various other members of the royal family enjoying themselves get-ting the fresh air, in their best bibs and tuckers. You can also, if you have money enough, buy a dinner table, properly spread, with a lot of howling swells sit-ting around it, and longing for the lusting around it, and longing for the luscious paper dishes. We weren't cutting out that kind. It takes too much money to permit the snipping into them. But we were having a beautiful time cutting out individual dolls; putting their clothes on them, and seeing that their back hair was properly twisted up. Once Isadore, who was doing the pasting, got Pocahontas's long, flowing, black locks on Queen Victoria; but that wasn't as bad a break as putting Buffalo Bill's head on the Daisy Queen of Spain's shoulders. However, these little mistakes were rectified, and the large family of paper dolls was ready to start out.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S PLAYGROUND.

Where were they going? Uptown on a corner almost in the heart of the city, near where the noisy trains come in, is a building that was put up by kind-hearted people that it might be a home and a resting place for the little children who couldn't run and jump and play like those of yours whom you love so dearly. Although the elevated road is quite near it, and the great station just on the other side, these little people have a fine garden. It is way up on top of the house, all closed in by glass, so that in winter time there is enough warmth, and in the summer the glass top can be rolled back and the rays of sunshine fall on the children, warm and golden. All the little folk who are not in bed are helped to the elevator, or are rolled there in chairs, and they go up in squads to the big playground. There they have hammocks and swings, and, if they are boys, they play ball, and if they are girls the have whole families of dolis who have a yod time with their little mothers. It is true no boy runs after the ball, but it is also, true that, among all these little people there is not a single crutch. The good doctor thinks that if they can walk at all, they can do it slowly and without the crutch that would distort their shoulders.

These are the people for whom Isadore and I have been working. We had paper doils by the hundreds, and, in addition, we had a wonderful book that was to belong to all the children for all time; but for special times it was to be the property of that one who was most unhappy. The

we had a wonderful book that was to belong to all the children for all time; but for special times it was to be the property of that one who was most unhappy. The leaves of this book were in color like unto the rainbow. The edges were pinked in tiny points, and on every page was pasted pictures of all sorts and conditions of people, and dogs and cats and ships, and everything that could possibly interest a child. One page was great. It had a fierce-looking bulldog in the center, while up in one corner, so placed that they turned up their aristocratic noses at cocherub pup in another corner, was a group of fox terriers. Then, too, there were pages with nothing but bables on them; there were pages rich with flowers, and we believed that, unless a boy was in great pain, he would always find something to amuse him in that book.

little people were having a treat of ice cream and cake. This pleasure was given to them by a lady in the West, a lady who made me her almoner, and whose kladness I have never been able to ac-knowledge, because a careless servant destroyed her letter, and so her address was lost. Her money furnished iced cream was lost. Her money furnished iced cream for all these little people, and another kind woman gave the cake, so that they really had a party. When one is young and sick and feverish, there is nothing that tastes quite so good as iced cream. And when one is young and feels well, except for that bad leg, why then there is nothing quite so good as iced cream. After the party came the paper dolls. The smallest girl of all had first choice.

SHE TOOK QUEEN VICTORIA. a baby in long clothes, and Mr. Cleveland riding a pony. As she was only 4 years a baby in long clothes, and Mr. Cleveland riding a pony. As she was only 4 years old, her mistake in choosing Mr. Cleveland must be set down to her youth. Timmy had the next choice. Timmy is a dear friend of mine, who, according to actual time, has been on this earth nine years, counted by pain he has lived a hundred. Always he is there in his little bed, and the pain is very, very bad when Timmy can't smile. The other day a lady gave him a pot of primroses. Two of the buds have blossomed, and Timmy felt himself a rich man today because, though he couldn't go up on the roof, his flower went up, and all the children looked at it. They knew what were the old flowers and what were the new, and they credited the birth of the new entirely to Timmy's influence.

Timmy chose lady dolls. He hasn't a very good opinion of men. He wouldn't be where he now is if his father hadn't kreked him downstairs once when he was too drunk to know whether a baby of 3 or a piece of wood, were not the samé. Timmy thinks that most men get drunk and beat their wives and are rough with their children because that's the style of men he met in the tenement he used to live in. However, he has GREAT ADMIRATION FOR LADIES.

end of the room, and those who were not in bed were kept up in the playroom. All but Maggie. Maggie sits in a chair all the time, and is as merry as a grig, day in and day out. A hard-hearted mother brought her there and left her when she was nothing but a baby, but she has become the child of the house, and now, at 19, she whirls around in her chair and gives any medicine that is necessary, and is a medium for asking favors, and doesn't hesitate to promise that the day will come when all vain will stop to those of pleasure.

doesn't hesitate to promise that the day will come when all pain will stop to those who are suffering. So there was just Maggie and the nurse that Timmy always called "The pretty lady," because her eyes are full of tender-ness, and her face is LIKE THE BLESSED MOTHERS, and the doctor and the little dog and me. Holding my hand, he asked, half dreamily, "Will they all be well some day?" And I only could nod, "Yes." Then he said that he liked the paper dolls, but somehow they all seemed to be walking away from him. The nurse asked him if he had any pain. He said he didn't think he had, but somehow it seemed to him as if, where there used to be three primroses, a great many more had come, and that somehody was standing near him, holding just such a bunch of lilides as he saw last Easter. Perhaps it was the picture at the foot of his bed that made him think this, but he reached out the thin, pale, little hands to his unseen visitor, and we all kept quiet. And then it was Isadore, who had crept up quietly, who began to say in low tones the Hebrew prayer for the dying, and nobody spoke. Though the words were strange, Timmy said "Amen" at the right time, and while we looked, the little dog gave a long, loud, plaintive moan, and we knew that nevermore would we hear Timmy speak. And there were the flowers and the paper dolls are grinning just as cheerfully in the hands of a little girl, who is posing them for a wedding, and, horror of horrors! has united the Empress of the orrors! has united the Empress

CHILDREN IN DEATH'S PRESENCE. This afternoon the flowers stood beside the little coffin that held happy Timmy, This afternoon the movers stood beside the little coffin that held happy Timmy, and around which were grouped all his little friends in the hospital. Somebody said a kindly prayer, and then, all singing together, the children made beautifut that always-beautiful hymn, "Abide With Me." After that they all looked at Timmy for the last time. And to me it seemed as if there need be said no pitying word for him, but oh! so many for them. How can you, who have happy, healthy children, refrain from giving of your plenty just a little to those whose life is made up of suffering? It means so much to them—the something from the outside world. It may be only a great golden orange. It may be a bag of sweets, it may be a great, gorgeous French doll that is to belong to all in turn, or it may be a lot of paper dolls to be divided among them. Let it be something. Nobody is so poor that she, if she is a mother, cannot give something to those little people whose life is so sad.

AND THEN THEY ARE SO BRAVE.

sick or well? It means an immense amount of pleasure, and, of course, the money can be spent when it is wished, because there is always somebody who goes outside. Why, a purse that clicks and snaps will be opened and shut a hundred times a day from the pure enjoyment that comes from having money of one's own.

PAR'S APPEAL DEPAL BORDELLED

[From a Special Contributor-] Primitive man may not have enjoyed the luxury of palaces, railroads, aesthetic civilization or political strife, but he cerilization or political strife, but he certainly drank pure water. He did not have to pay big taxes for the privilege of having it carried through lead pipes from streams polluted by house and barn waste, nor did he have to boil it. Lucky, indeed, was primitive man, and lucky today the housewife who knows her drinking water comes straight from a pure crystal spring, safe in the depths of some woodland, untouched by the vandalistic hand of progress. Such water was meant by that first great sanitarian, Hippocrates, when he named "pure water" as the first of the three requisites of long life.

great importance of water supply, and its attendant dangers.

DISEASES BRED IN WATER. Biology has made it very clear that there are sever alvery serious diseases contracted only though polluted water. Typhold, which kills about 50,000 people every year in the United States, stands first as one to be dreaded. Unlike cholera, another water disease which asserts itself quickly and disadly and moves like a sirst as one to be dreaded. Unlike cholera, another water disease which asserts itself quickly and dieadly, and moves like a plague, typhoid deceives by its incipiency, working its deadly way unnoticed sometimes for week; before the victim is aware of its actual presence.

Next to such decisive action as the typhoid microbe exerts upon the physical forces come those other less fatal, but quite important maladies known as "enterio disordera." These are invariably the direct result of contaminated water. They make themselves evident by indigestion, nausea, flatuency, diarrhoea and even lead to dysentery and more prolonged troubles. All sorts of causes are ascribed by those who do not consider drinking water as at all dangerous. Because the water looks clear and has no smell or sediment, it is believed to be all right, whereas those points are scarcely of my value as designating purity.

"THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET."

One of the oldest, most beautiful moss-covered wells in the country supplied crystal, sweet and apparently perfect water to a family for a century of ancestors, until one day a stranger was taken down with typhoid a mile away. He had brought the typhoid with him, from some far-away place, but before he recovered that "moss-covered bucket" had carried typhoid to every member of the family who drank of the old well. The seepage from the outhouse of the farm a mile away went straight to the old well by an underground channel. The ancestral well has lost its glory, and a tombstone marks its last off-spring of affliction, instead of the peace and joy of a fundred years. This is but one of milli ons of instances occurring over the whole land constantly. We need to swake the fact that feet the fact that feet the fact the fact that feet the fact the fact the fact that feet the fact the fact the fact the fact the fact the fact that feet the fact the fact the fact the fact the fact that fact the fact that fact the fact that fact the fact the fact the fact the fact that fact the fact the fact the fact the fact the fa tal, sweet and apparently perfect water to a family for a century of ancestors, until one day a stranger was taken down with typhoid a mile away. Fraudulent "Schools."

(San Francisco Chronicle:) The Florida schools for orange-growing will probably be broken up by the recent freeze, as even the credulous British youths who have paid enough coin for learning what they could have gained for their labor elsewhere, will see that there is no use in staying in a State where orange culture has been given a permanent set-back for years. This method of swindling the sons of wealthy Englishmen has been adopted in California in several places, but the managers of these fruit-farm schools have been unable to isolate their pupils as successfully as in Florida. The moment that these English lads leafn that they are paying for what any American would willingly teach them in exchange for their labor they are apt to abandon their tutors. The English public should be warned that any schools of this character are fraudulent.

THE NICARAGUANS.

Primitive Inhabitants of the Southern Republic,

Their Impressions of the Creation Peculiar Idea About the Birth of Man.

They Had Idols and Sacrificed to Them-A Sketch by a Former United States Consul to Nicaragua.

[From a Special Contributor.]

The impressions of the world and the creation held by the primitive inhabitants of Nicaragua were not dissimilar to those entertained by civilized nations of this day, xpressing their thoughts upon the subject at interests and entertains one.

Among them the delty was known as 'Corazon del Cielo," meaning in English, "The Heart of the Heavens." This God was believed to be three persons in one, distinguished by the names of "Relam-pago," "Tureno" and "El Rayo." These astributes, if I may so designate them, mean in our vernacular, "lightning," 'thunder' and "thunderbolt." The powers of their God lead one intuitively to turn ortrayed their god, Zeus, flashing lighting and hurling thunderbolts.

When we discover such striking resem-When we discover such striking resemblances between the religion of two races, separated by thousands of miles, who, so far as the pages of history tell us, were unacquainted with each other, it leads us to imagine that the ancestors of the tribes that inhabited America when Columbus discovered this continent were greatnavigators, or had means of reaching the Old World by land that have now become obliterated. It is not preposterous to navigators, or had means of reaching the old World by land that have now become obliterated. It is not preposterous to suppose that the inhabstants of the Old World might have sailed across Bering Sea, or they may have crossed on foot at a time when the sea was frozen over. These theories are discussed almost daily, and it makes one believe that there is truth in them when such startling similitudes break in on us as already stated.

In favor of the opinion that the aborigines of America must either have been at one time part of the inhabitants of the Old World, or have had communication with it, I call attention to a manuscript written in the sixteenth century by a Spaniard, and preserved for a long time in the archives of Chiapas, Mexico. The author says that to the east of the town of Ocosingo, among very ancient edifices, are eight towers, distinct and separate, worked with singular art, in whose walls e eight towers, distinct and separate, orked with singular art, in whose walls e seen sculptured statues and shields at represent personages dressed with a lilitary habit different from those of the iorigines, and very like those worn at other epoch in the Old World. The men and are the justly celebrated ruins of alenque. This same author asserts that a native this same author asserts that a native that it is a same author asserts that a native that a part of the same author asserts that a native that a native that a same author as a people and that commercial relations with them, at the Americans. The Abbe Brasseur of Bourbourg, who evoted the greater part of his life to the tudy of the languages, the traditions and the monuments of the aborigines, thinks the American civilization was not rought from the other continent. The lustrious writer attempts to show by geogleal, historical and linguistic evidence, iso from old Mexican and Central American manuscripts, that the territory that today Colombia, Central American manuscripts, that the territory that to commercial the dexico, extended at one time into the Attnitic Ocean as far as the Azores; that me or more various cataclysms caused he disappearance of the major part of the ountries mentioned, and that they not fay did not receive anything in the way fart, culture, etc., from Asia and Europe, ut that here was the cradle of the civiliation of the world. The ancient tribes of Nicaragua possessed ak nowledge of the deluge, for they tate in their records that the world was overed by water; that all human beings hen existing, as well as all the animals, who aved themselves by climbing to the tops of the tailest trees and remaining there mit the water had subsided. Can it be then existing, as well as all the animals, were destroyed, except the monkeys, who saved themselves by climbing to the tops of the tallest trees and remaining there until the water had subsided. Can it be frem the pre-historic race of Nicaragua that Darwin derived his theory that man sprang from the monkey?

The primitive imbabitants of Nicaragua had a calendar corresponding to that of the Old World, but they divided the year into eighteen months of twenty days. Each century was composed of fifty-two years, divided into four parts of thirsteen years each. A similar calendar was found in Mexico when Cortez made the conquest of New Spain.

According to the aborigines of this section, an attempt was first made to make man out of clay, but the effort was a failure; afterward man was made of cork and woman of reed-mace. The ancient writings of the country say that it was because of a deficient heart and intelligence, and their forgetting the Creator, that they were all destroyed by a flood.

Their records contain a novel description of the creation of the negro. They say that on either side of a river, in a far-off ignd resided a god; that one of these gods made a man, but that he was black, so he took him down to the river and washed him until he was white. The god on the other side of the river became envious at this creation of man, and began to fashion another himself.

As soon as he had completed his work he went down also to the river to bathe his man, but found that the neighboring god had dried up all the water, save a very little, sufficient to moisten the soles of the feet and palms of the hands. In this way do they account for the negro having the palm of his hands and the soles of his feet whiter than the rest of his body.

They possessed a mythology, and their divinities were the same more or less description of the case of the feet whiter than the rest of his body.

gro having the palm of his hands and the soles of his feet whiter than the rest of his body.

They possessed a mythology, and their divinities were the same, more or less, as those of the ancient Romans and Greeks. Their gods of the first order were of the mountains, the home, the cemeteries and of the dead; those of lesser rank of the grains, of the trees, and of the water. For the greater as welf as for the lesser divinities there were feasts during the year, on which occasion they burned a cactus opunta in the temple of the idols, after which they danced to the sound of musical instruments. On certain grand festive days they made offerings of fruits and flowers to their principal gods. Some of the people sacrificed animals and human viotims. Of these grand festivities there were two kinds—public or general, in which all participated; others of a special character, that were celebrated by certain families or individuals.

The first were held at a fixed time, usually at the beginning of the rainy season; the other took place when it was a public necessity that demanded them. In order to fix the day and hour of these extraordinary feasts, also the kind of sacrifice to be made, the pontiff consulted chance by by means of auguries.

The general custom in Nicaragua during the important festivities was to serve in all the grand houses abundance of edibles and fermented drinks. The guests often induged to an extent of insensibility. This custom of serving refreshments on the occasion of feasts is still adhered to but the habit is confined more to the common people, the better classes only receiving their intimates, while the first welcome all that choose to call.

tims were always received with kindness and careful consideration.

When the day arrived for the sacrifice, the priests and the abeliemes took the victim by the hair and conducted him to the blace of sacrifice, usually a place in front of one of the idols, to which they addressed their prayers in a loud voice. The victim was tied to a stone of especial form and with throbbing breast awaited the hour of his doom. At the hour appointed the grand high priest donned the pontifical robes, placed upon his head a kind of mitre, and with a knife of obsidian stone approached the victim, wounding him in the left side. Afterwards his heart was removed and offered as an oblation to the idol. Following this ceremony came that of sprinkling the principal idol with the blood of the victim; a few drops were then flung to the sun and to the other idols. The head of the victim was then nailed upon an altar, remaining so for some time, in order that the gods might be propitiated. The body of the sacrificed was then burned in a large earthen dish, and the priests, sometimes the people, partook of this so called consecrated food.

The Nicaraguan aborigines believed in a future state. They deposited in the grave the arms and other articles that they judged necessary for the journey of the departed. Some of the tribes had the custom of entombing alive the slaves of the master, before his inhumation, inorder that they might have his home ready in the other world against his coming. They also burled the wife with the husband, with the object of reuniting them in the other life.

It is an unfortunate circumstance that the ancient writings of the Nicaraguans fell into the hands of the priests who accompanied the Spanish conquitadores, for these same fanatics saw anught in the records but the works of the devil, and in consequence consigned them to the flames. Beyond dispute much valuable history became smoke, and facts which we are now seeking doubtless were contained in the writings destroyed under the cloak of religious zeal.

For some time there has been an alarming decrease in the profits of many manufactories, and a consequent cut in the wages of the employees.

Many old manufacturers have gone to the wall, and no new ones seem to be taking their places. The combined commercial bodies of San Francisco have called a convention to discuss the situation and see what can be done.

A circular has been issued, inviting delegates from the southern part of the State, and yesterday a telegram was received from M. M. Barnett, desiring information as to the number of delegates Los Angeles proposed to send.
